Under shimmering springtime skies Atlanta's first annual Dogwood Festival got away yesterday to a brilliant start with band concerts in the public parks, auto racing thrills, art exhibits and delightful dance exhibitions contesting for the center of attraction. Yet the splendid programs of yesterday were only a sample of what is yet to come.

Tonight Stowkowski plays.

On every side that is the topic of discussion. Never before has the south had an opportunity to hear, in person, such a distinguished musical aggregation.

From remote sections of Dixie, and for that matter, from all sections of the Union and Cuba, visitors were pouring into the city yesterday in anticipation of the great musical event tonight.

The big crowd which attended the Fairyland Pageant yesterday at Grant Field to witness the spectacle of 1,000 performers taking part in the presentations of famous folklore tales, is expected to be exceeded today.

The weatherman has promised a beautiful day with the temperatures higher than those of yesterday. During the afternoon the mercury will rise to the neighborhood of 72 degrees, it was predicted, bringing real spring weather.

There is not the slightest danger of rain before the middle of the week, if by then, said the forecaster. If there is any at all it will be in the form of light showers, he said.

Trio Trapped 7 Days Without Food Reached by Pipe at 141-Foot Level

Wives Kneel in Mud To Hear Mates' Voices as 100 Rescuers Blast Through Rock Slide; Collapsing Walls Endanger Mercy Workers.

MOOSE RIVER, N. S., April 20.—(AP)—The men entombed in the Moose River gold mine sent word that one of their number was dead today, after flood waters rose rapidly in the pit where they had been imprisoned a week.

They said the dead man was Herman B. Magill, Toronto lawyer and one of the owners of the abandoned gold mine.

MOOSE RIVER, N. S., April 19.—(AP)—Rescuers talked through a pipe line today with three men trapped for a week in an abandoned gold mine, and shortly after one of the rescue crew declared, "We can keep them alive for six months if necessary."

Food, waterproof garments, medicines, flashlights and instructions were sent them through the tube. Soup was given them through a rubber hose.

Wives of two of the victims knelt in the mud and wept at the sound of their husband's voices.

Miners drove forward with renewed vigor to clear out the dangerous Reynolds shaft of the mine in an effort to reach the 141-foot level where Alfred Scadding, Dr. R. E. Robertson, prominent surgeon, and Herman B. Magill, lawyer, had been imprisoned for seven days without food by a rock slide.

But there was no chance for steady work. Unsupported walls collapsed time after time as daring miners, many of them with no more than five hours sleep in four days, dug forward. At each warning they scrambled to safety, but engineers in charge of the rescue feared a loss of life in saving the three below.

Meanwhile, other rescuers strove at a new vertical shaft being sunk from the surface. It was down 45 feet, less than half-way, and it was estimated at least three days would be required to sink it to the 141-foot level.

Contact with the men was established shortly after midnight when tapping signals were heard of the pipe driven through a five-inch diamond drill hole.

"Hello," the rescue miners shouted down.

"Hello," came back the faint voice of Scadding.

He told them all three men were

ALLEN EXPRESSES FEE DRIVE THANKS

$10,000 Entry Fee Attacked as F. D. R. Forces Rush Their Campaign.

The absurdity of setting an entry fee of $10,000 in the state democratic primary was pointed out yesterday by Marion H. Allen, the President's Georgia campaign manager, at the same time as he expressed his gratification and appreciation of the magnificent manner in which Georgians are responding to the President's cause by raising the exorbitant fee.

"As far as we have so far been able to ascertain," Allen declared, "such an exorbitant and absurd fee has never before been asked of any candidate for any office in any section of the nation.

"If all states were to follow Georgia's lead, it would mean that to become even a candidate for party nomination for the presidency, the candidate would have to pay fees totaling $480,000.

"President Roosevelt could not pay such a fee. Neither could most of the illustrious men of the nation's past. For other states to follow the dangerous precedent set by this state, or rather by the democratic executive committee of the state, would be tantamount to confining the eligibility for the presidency to men of great wealth.

"The nation is not founded on such

Explosion Is Fatal To Two Floridans

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., April 19.—(AP)—John Hughes, 18, and Horace Tros, 25-year-old sophomore at the University of Florida, were burned to death early this morning when their small cottage suddenly burst into flames following an explosion.

Officials have been unable to advance a cause for the explosion.

Neighbors were of the belief that it occurred while Tros, who was preparing for the medical profession, was conducting a chemical experiment. Others expressed the opinion that a kerosene lamp exploded.

REDS ADMIT NEED OF 'FOES'' SYSTEM

Soviet Announces State Not Ready To Abolish Capitalistic Inequality.

MOSCOW, April 19.—(AP)—That the soviet state must for the time being carry on with certain traditions inherited from the bourgeoisie was among important announcements contained in a statement on the governmental and social development in soviet Russia published today.

The statement made plain the time has not yet arrived to abandon the principle or practice of compulsion and that inequality of income must continue in the transitory period.

Further, the statement showed, democratization of the soviet system under the new constitution now being formulated, will not lead to the creation of political parties or any organization opposed to the communist party. These explanations were printed in the magazine Bolshevik, official organ of the central committee of the communist party.

The new constitution under study will grant the right of an equal vote to all soviet citizens except those disfranchised by the courts. The class origin of the citizen will not be taken into account, the article said. The voting will be direct and secret and according to Joseph Stalin, soviet leader, as quoted in the magazine, will serve as a "whip in the hands of the people against badly working organs of the state."

The "hopes of our enemies," the Bolshevik continued, "that the new constitution will bring the creation of new political parties and therefore weakening the influence of the communist party, will soon be dashed."

It declared voting "will be conducted on a higher level than under a capitalistic saytem where rival parties are created to represent rival classes. Our system," the magazine explained, "will be devoted solely to the ousting of bureaucrats and other unworthies and to the election of the best individuals to office."

The soviet state in its present phase of development can, in a conditional sense, still be called a "bourgeois," the Bolshevik stated.

Cobb Says: Distress Is Basis of Comedy

By IRVIN S. COBB.

(Copyright, 1936, by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

SANTA MONICA, Cal., April 19. Except the obituary column, nothing could be sadder than the newspaper account of a Gridiron Club dinner. Yet Gridiron Club dinners aim to be satirically amusing and frequently are.

Turning them out must be a tremendously hard job, because they deal with the national political scene and any producer of farces will tell you you can't burlesque a burlesque. In other words, you can't be very funny on a subject which already is so much funnier than anything you can think of to write about it—and that's what the fellows at Washington are up against.

This business of trying to be comic is a serious business anyway, especially since all comedy is predicated on distress. A fat man falling down makes us laugh because he suffers both in spirit and flesh. But if he is a pallbearer, say, at a funeral and falls down on his own high hat and maybe breaks up the services—well, now then, you've got something that's really funny.

A definition of comedy could be: Tragedy standing on its head with its pants torn.

NEW REVENUE BILL WILL REACH HOUSE EARLY THIS WEEK

Work Relief and Supply Measures Share Stage; Long Battle Is in Prospect Over Tax Scheme.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—(AP)—Congressional leaders gave the clear-track signal today to taxes, work relief, anud departmental supply bills and announmed adjournment must be taken not later than the first week in June.

Any other major measures not acted on then will have to wait for the new congress to be elected in November, they said.

This means that bills calling for direct ship subsidies, loans and grants for low cost housing and slum clearance, omnibus flood control, and commodity exchange regulation are dead unless administration pressure is exerted.

The tax bill, seven weeks in the making in a house ways and means subcommittee, is expected to emerge from the full committee Tuesday. The next day the house will begin debating it if it is introduced in time.

Hearings Scheduled.

Leaders said it would be a month or more from now before it was finally enacted. The senate finance committee probably will hold two weeks of public and executive hearings. The same amount of time will be needed for senate action, leaders said. As in the past, a flood of amendments will be offered.

As finally written by the house subcommittee, the bill provides for a tax on corporation net income graduated according to sums withheld from distribution to stockholders, temporary extension of the existing capital stock and excess profits taxes, levies on foreign stockholders in domestic industries and a windfall tax designed to recapture from processors a part of un-

PROOF IS CLAIMED BRUNO INNOCENT

Lawyer Reports He Has Found Ransom Cache, Says Solution Near.

CHICAGO, April 19.—(AP)—Bernard J. Finnigan, young Chicago lawyer who went east to hunt an alleged hidden cache of "Lindbergh ransom money," flew home tonight with the assertion that the "real solution" of the famed kidnap-murder case "may be only a few hours away" and "certainly will not be more than a few weeks."

The lawyer said evidence now in the hands of Governor Harold G. Hoffman, of New Jersey, indicated that executed Bruno Richard Hauptman was "a positively innocent man" and that "a number of other people" were the perpetrators of the crime.

Finnigan declared he had found the $5,000 "ransom cache" in New York just as his convicted forger client, Stephen Spitz, who claimed to have "bought" the bills, had promised.

This money "is available" to Governor Hoffman, the lawyer said, adding that "a lot more" of the ransom bills "will be produced."

He said he had been working on "a number of phases" of the Lindbergh case for Governor Hoffman "since January 1."

He added he had made the trip

COMMITTEE OF 13 TO HANDLE POLICE URGED BY GILLIAM

Would Retain Present Members; Council Will Be Given Measure Today in Move To Clear Snarl.

A council measure aimed at ending the present police committee impasse will be introduced this afternoon in city council by Alderman Ed A. Gilliam, of the twelfth ward, in which he will advocate enlarging the committee from its present membership of five to 13 members, one from each city ward, he announced yesterday.

"I have no ax to grind in this matter," Gilliam said. "Under the provisions of my plan, with one member from each ward, my ward already being represented by Councilman H. M. Rantin, would be entitled to no more members. My action is motivated purely by a desire to see an end to the constant bickering and wrangling which certainly must have a demoralizing effect on the members of the police department.

"I believe that it would be entirely to the best interests of all concerned to enlarge the committee to 13 members."

Precedents Are Cited.

Gilliam pointed out that ample precedent had been established for the move, citing the fact that there were 13 members each on the finance, sewer and streets committees.

Under Gilliam's proposal, the new members would be appointed by Mayor Key and all present members would retain their memberships and G. Dan Bridges would continue as chairman of the enlarged group.

Gilliam pointed out that five wards are now represented by members on the police committee. These are the twelfth by Rantin; fifth by Allen Couch; thirteenth by Alvin Richards; third by Bridges and the first by William H. Joyner.

MILL OPERATORS ASK CODE RETURN

Deploring Post-NRA Conditions, Federation Supports Textile Measure.

NEW YORK, April 19.—(AP)—The National Federation of Textiles has decided to support the national textile bill pending in the house of representatives, President Peter Van Horn announced today.

In his letter to President Roosevelt which he left at the White House Saturday, Van Horn said the action by the board of directors on Friday was the first response by an industrial organization to the President's recent request to "do something" about unemployment.

"This action was taken for two principal reasons," Van Horn wrote. "First, because we have found it impossible since the discontinuance of codes to control effectively unfair competition within the industry through voluntary agreements, and second because of the desire of our membership to offer their small bit of constructive assistance in reducing unemployment thereby increasing purchasing power and lowering taxes."

Van Horn said a comparison of 100 mills for the last six months of 1934 under NRA code and for the last six months of 1935 without it showed pro-

League Will Deplore War Today, But Carefully Shun Effective Action

Convinced Only Force Can Save Selassie, None Is Ready To Risk War With Italy by Employing Military Measures.

GENEVA, April 19.—(AP)—A prevailing conviction that use of economic sanctions is futile and only force could halt the Italo-Ethiopian war was discernible tonight on the eve of an extraordinary session of the council of the League of Nations.

But no nation seemed disposed to employ military measures against Premier Mussolini. No action, not even Great Britain, wants to risk war in Europe by combatting powerful Italy, "reborn" under the sting of sanctions.

The idealistic exaltation to protect the integrity of Ethiopia against Italy, who the League formally found guilty of aggression, seemed to be weakening as statesmen arranged for the meeting.

A resolution deploring the war is expected to be adopted by the council tomorrow and existing sanctions undoubtedly will continue, but almost everyone in Geneva feels that Ethiopia seems doomed and the League cannot save her. A League committee of 13 admitted Friday that its efforts to bring peace had collapsed and called the session of the council.

Emperor Haile Selassie will pay the bill, observers were agreed. His independent state will, it was feared here, meet the same fate as other African regions like Morocco, Algiers and Tunis and even Egypt and those vast districts farther south which are colony mandates of the great powers.

The warning of Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin yesterday that if the use of poison gas in Africa is followed in any future war in Europe anarchy will follow and civilization will perish, created a profound impression in international circles here.

A report of a committee of jurists appointed by the League said Italian forces sprayed some 13 Ethiopian towns with poison gas.

The Journal Des Nations blamed individual Ethiopian warriors for committing atrocities upon wounded Italian soldiers, but emphasized that what it called the resort to poison gas by Italian forces could only have been with authority of the government in Rome.

FLOODS THREATEN COASTAL HIGHWAY

Rising Waters at Darien Expected To Close Brunswick-Savannah Route.

DARIEN, Ga., April 19.—(AP)—Rising flood waters today brought the threat of isolation to approximately 2,000 residents of this section of coastal Georgia by the expected inundation of a main highway, U. S. 17, both north and south of here.

Incoming tides from the sea were expected to aggravate the situation by backing up the flood waters on the Altamaha and South Newport rivers.

The flood waters were not expected to get into this city itself, which is built on a high bank of the Altamaha river.

The expected submerging of the highway between here and Brunswick, Ga., would cut Darien off from the south and flooding of the same road where it crosses the South Newport river, several miles north of Darien, would halt travel from the north via Savannah, Ga.

Main Routes.

The road is one of the main routes used by tourists in going to and from Florida resorts.

As the crest of the Altamaha river was looked for late today or tomorrow, the entire northern end of Butler Island, across from Darien, on which Tillinghast L. Huston, sportsman, maintains a palatial home, truck farm and dairy, was inundated.

The Huston home had water in its first floor, the dairy was flooded and a portion of the truck farm, which has diked fields, was submerged when a dike gave way.

Huston's herd of registered dairy cattle, valued by him at approximately $100,000, was moved to higher ground here.

Still occupying his home, Huston was using a rowboat to get back and forth between the highway and his house, which stands some distance from the road.

Relief Organized.

Relief forces of the Red Cross, the WPA, the FERA and other agencies have been organized for a week for emergency aid in the Altamaha delta area.

Lowland residents who were forced to evacuate their homes by the rising waters already have been rendered assistance.

With an area from Townsend to Darien affected by the high waters, medical authorities stood ready to avert any dangers from disease when the water recedes.

Dr. M. E. Winchester, Glynn (Brunswick) county health officer, said clinics have been established at Townsend and Everett City for the administration of typhoid serum to those wishing the protection and that arrangements had been made to treat wells which have been polluted by flood waters.

GEORGIANS AWAIT YEOMANS' ACTION

Attorney General Takes Spotlight as State Case Goes to High Court.

The spotlight of state political interest, long trained on Governor Talmadge, shifts temporarily to Attorney General M. J. Yeomans today when the state supreme court will take up the first of several cases resulting from Governor Talmadge's dictatorship of state finances.

Observers were of the opinion that Attorney General Yeomans will appear before the supreme court and, as head of the state department of law, do what he can to quash the state's participation in the litigation which is being handled by his, the attorney general's, assistants.

This theory is based on the fact that Attorney General Yeomans has publicly announced that he does not believe the Governor is following a legal course.

The case before the court is that of the three Atlanta banks and the First National Bank, of Marietta, who have applied for an interpleader and instructions from the court as to what to do with more than $2,500,000 they had on hand when the Governor took over state finances and suspended State Treasurer George B.

Prowler Shot Down; Man Stabbed in Fight

Two men were taken to Grady hospital early this morning in critical condition, one shot by a watchman at the Sheppard Plate and Machine Works at 1272 Murphy avenue, S. W., the other with a five-inch slash in his throat, received in a brawl in front of a cafe on Gilmer street near Piedmonth avenue.

The man shot by the watchman, Nolen Roberts, is unidentified. The bullet lodged near his heart. Roberts told police the man lunged at him in an alley between two buildings on the premises of the company. He is about 25 years old.

John Benson, 25, of Austell, was attacked after an argument in the cafe, apparently over a woman. His assailant escaped. A man and a woman were being held for questioning.

Nassibu's Right Flank Is Smashed, Giving Foemen Water Holes and Position for Big Push.

LONDON, April 19.—(UP)—Italian troops today occupied Ankober, only 80 miles northeast of Addis Ababa, the Daily Telegraph correspondent at the Ethiopian capital reported.

Occupation of Ankober, less than a day's journey from Addis Ababa, reportedly followed a severe raid by Italian bombing planes.

Crown Prince Asfao Wosan was en route to Dessye today, presumably to contact Marshall Pietro Badoglio, commander in chief of Italy's East African armies, reports relayed in Rome from Dessye said.

It was reported that the crown prince, Emperor Haile Selassie's eldest son, is ready to negotiate peace with Italy and that he is supported by Empress Menen and the supreme head of the Coptic church of Ethiopia.

ROME, April 19.—(UP)—After five days of fierce fighting which cost Italy the heaviest casualties of her East African campaign, General Rodolpho Graziani today smashed the right flank of the Dedjazmach Nasibu's Ethiopian army. Ethiopians are in full retreat.

His "hell on wheels" motorized columns pushed on across the fringes of the Ogaden desert toward Harar and Jijiga, most formidable Ethiopian strongholds.

In an official communique transmitted through field headquarters of Marshal Pietro Badoglio, Graziani admitted 10 officers killed or wounded, three flying officers wounded and several hundred Italian troops out of action.

Planes Brought Down.

Two Italian airplanes were shot down, he said, but they succeeded in coming to earth behind the Italian lines.

Several thousand Ethiopians lie dead on the field of action.

Most of the Italian losses were among Libyan and Somali troops.

(From Addis Ababa came news frenzied Ethiopian women, undaunted by the demoralizing defeats, exhorted their men today to fight, even for a lost cause.

(Confronted with an imminent Italian assault on the capital, preparations were made to defend Addis Ababa and a special train laden with refugees started for Djibouti, French Somaliland.

(In hope of sparing Addis Ababa the terror of air raids, imperial officials ordered troops retreating from the northern front to avoid the capital.)

Graziani's victory gives him possession of vital water holes on the

Norris Declares America's Future Rests Entirely in Roosevelt's Hands

WASHINGTON, April 19.—(AP)—Indorsing a movement to organize "first voters" in behalf of President Roosevelt, Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, said today "the future welfare of American institutions and American ideals demands the re-election" of Roosevelt.

"The future is more in the hands of our great leader, Franklin D. Roosevelt, than in any political organization interested only in the welfare of a political party," the veteran republican independent said in a statement.

"As I see it it is a question far beyond politics and is one which enters into the fundamental principles of our very civilization.

"The student of present-day conditions is irresistibly led to the conclusion that, more than any other one man, Roosevelt stands out as an ideal statesman, able and competent to solve the difficult problems of state which now confront our leaders."

The "first voter" movement was initiated last week by Paul Best, former president of the District of Columbia Young Democrats, who hopes to organize 2,500 chapters of voters who have reached their majority since the last election.

"One of the hopeful signs of our political situation," Norris said, "is the interest which is being taken in our country's welfare by the young men and women of the nation.

"This activity is entirely non-partisan. It comes from honest study of the patriotic student who, regardless of party, wants the return of prosperity and happiness."

Norris added that "the rank and file of our citizenship," thinking of the "prosperity of home and fireside," recognize in Mr. Roosevelt "a leader who can and will bring order out of chaos and steer our ship of state in the direction which will solve the economic difficulties which are now confronting our country.

"In my opinion, the future welfare of American institutions and American ideals demands the re-election of this great man to the office which he now holds. . . .

"No greater service can be rendered to the common individual by the first voters of America than to unite loyally in an effort to see that President Roosevelt is re-elected."

8 Killed, 80 Injured As Arabs Attack Jews

JAFFA, Palestine, April 19.—(AP)—Nine Jews and two Arabs were killed and 65 Jews and 15 Arabs injured today in race riots which included clashes between Arabs and Jews and fights with police.

This predominantly Arab city is close by the all-Jewish city of Tel-Aviv.

The Palcor agency reported Arab mobs were stirred this morning when agitators spread a rumor many Arabs had been killed by Jews. Jewish passers-by were then attacked and five of them were taken to a hospital.

The crowd then marched on the Jaffa branch of the Anglo-Palestine bank, a Jewish-owned institution. Unable to control the surging demonstrators, police fired and killed two Arabs.

This aroused the fury of the Arabs to a new pitch and they renewed the attacks on Jews, killing two.

NUDE WOMAN RIDES ON DAYTONA BEACH

Renee Villon Thrown Twice as Horses Register Protests.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., April 19. (UP)—Lady Godiva rode today over Daytona's famous beach, and the only protest was registered by a horse.

Reene Villon, former Ziegfeld chorine, clad only in a blonde wig and a smile, attempted to ride a full mile to give an "answer to prudery and opponents of nudism."

Complacent Daytona Beach citizens watched with little interest. The most emphatic protest was registered by the dancer's horse.

When she had ridden less than a block, the horse went into action stopped, reared and bolted.

The dancer sailed in a graceful arc over her mount's head, coming to rest on the sand, her blonde wig dangling over one ear.

Miss Villon, fan and bubble dancer, had a difficult time with her horses.

The first mount decided it wanted no part in the Lady Godiva act. As it was being led out of a truck, it took one look at the blond wig and vast expanses of white skin and bolted. It was the second horse which threw her.

After picking herself up from the sands, she remounted and continued on until a city policeman handed her a ticket, but it was later torn up.

FIRE IN COLLEGE PARK STARTED BY YOUTHS

Fire started by boys destroyed a vacant one-story house at 207 Wesley avenue, College Park, at about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The blaze attracted hundreds of Sunday motorists and strollers.

Chief T. L. Newborn, of the College Park fire department, said the house was formerly occupied by members of the Longino family. It had been vacant 10 years, he said.

Gaining rapid headway, the flames gutted the dwelling, leaving only part of the walls standing. A house adjoining was slightly damaged by heat from the burning structure.

Holds New System of Philosophy Futile

REV. ERNEST C. SWETNAM.

Reinforcement of Faith in Jesus Needed More Than New System

Editor's Note: This is the 64th in a series of articles dealing with Atlanta pastors and their services. Additional articles will appear on succeeding Mondays.

The world needs neither a new system of philosophy nor a restating of the facts of the Christian faith, but a reinforcement of the emphasis upon faith in the promises of Jesus, the Rev. Ernest C. Swetnam, pastor of the Payne Memorial Methodist church, declared in his sermon yesterday, based on the text, "The Work of the Comforter."

He said, in part:

"I do not believe that the world needs either a new system of philosophy, or a restating of the facts of the Christian faith, but a reinforcement of the emphasis we should lay upon faith in the promises of Jesus. There is available to all men sufficient knowledge with which to be saved. The number that appropriate to themselves sufficient faith to be saved is a much smaller number. Let us, in our thinking today, consider one of these promises. Jesus said, 'If ye love Me, keep My commandments, and I will pray the Father, and He shall send you another comforter who shall abide with you forever.'

Spirit of Truth.

"Jesus' description of this comforter is that He is the spirit of truth, unrecognized and undesired by the man of the world. His work is that 'He will reprove the world.' Another rendering of this word, is 'convict.' When a man is convicted in court his deeds are held up to the light. The spirit is to hold up worldliness to the light for the consideration of men.

"The spirit makes a three-fold demonstration of these things.

"First, He holds sin up to the light. In spite of the fact that sin is the most dreaded of all the enemies of mankind, there are some so foolish as to scoff at the idea of sin. People endeavor to prove by their very popularity that certain things they choose to do are not sinful. The vote of the majority can only be right when the majority is right, and mob violence has proven this to be a rare case. Had we lived in the day of Diana of the Ephesians, it is likely we would have been Diana worshippers because popular opinion in Ephesus favored Diana. This is seen in our attitude toward the liquor question. It matters not that liquor ruins those who seek it, the only thing that matters is that the majority desire it. This seems to be the thought of many politicians, and many citizens. And we go on record as resenting mightily any condemnation by any preacher of our own pet evils

Light of Truth.

"In these very unhappy circumstances lies the work of the Spirit, Comforter, holding sin up to the light of truth.

"Secondly, the Spirit holds our righteousness up to the light of truth. He reminds us that Jesus said 'Except your righteousness shall exceed that of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter the kingdom of heaven. 'Not many of us are surpassing the standard of the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees today. We today show more interest in the wares in the showcase of our religion than in the hidden wares in the shelves of our hearts. It was about the program of the church of his day that Jesus said, 'These ought ye to have done, and not left the other undone.' Today the Spirit is holding up to the light all of the things we call righteousness. At present we are very proud of our spiritual achievements, but seen fully lighted by the truth of our own responsibility, but they may not prove so attractive as we had hoped, when the day of judgment shall come.

Unjust Judgment.

"Finally, the Spirit is holding up judgment to be seen in the light of truth. Many of this generation endeavor to escape judgment by simply decrying it as unjust. A drunk man said to an officer, 'You can't arrest me,' but he went to jail just the same. Crying out against the judgment of God does not invalidate it. Our lack of concern about the judgment is also seen in our business dealings with each other, our disrespect for God's day of rest, our selfish striving for personal advancement, and in our failure to honor God's house and altar with our presence. Things that have happened recently might well cause us to stop and consider. Whatever may have directed the course of these storms and floods across our nation, we must remember His power when He said, 'Peace, be still.' Whatever brought about the depression, we must not forget that He fed His own with manna in the wilderness. Today the Spirit is saying in the words used in other days, 'For God shall bring every work into judgment with every secret thing, whether it be good or evil.

"What then must be our conclusion? Is it not true that if these matters are not being daily held up by the Spirit for consideration in our hearts that we are not the children adopted into the brotherhood of Jesus"

STORM VICTIM DIES

Dorothy Ree Fleming Succumbs at Piedmont.

Another casualty of the Gainesville tornado was recorded with the death early yesterday morning in Piedmont hospital of Dorothy Ree Fleming, 10.

The child was brought to Atlanta shortly after the tornado struck the north Georgia city. She had been unconscious since, suffering from a compound fracture of the skull.

The girl was injured when she was struck by a brick, hurled by the terrific wind, as she was driving to school in an automobile with her father, E. F. Fleming, veteran Gainesville employe of the Georgia Power Company, who survives.

Funeral services and burial will be held in Gainesville today, under direction of Donehoo-Brandon Company.

FLORIDA SHIP CANAL PROJECT CONTINUED

Contracts Covered By Undisbursed Funds Being Pushed.

OCALA, Fla., April 19.—(AP)—With approximately $1,600,000 of its allotments undisbursed but under contract, work on the Gulf-Atlantic ship canal across Florida is continuing at a lessening pace.

Two hundred workers were dropped from payrolls last week, and with the approximately 700 that had left the project for various reasons the present force totals about 5,500. Resignations accounted for most of the 700, while completion of excavation items caused the 200 to be laid off.

Clearing of the right-of-way continues along with planning for the completed projects despite the fact that congress has declined to vote additional funds. Supporters of the canal continue optimistic that an appropriation can be obtained to complete it.

Nearly one million cubic yards of earth have been excavated along a 7-mile front, and the right-of-way has been cleared for 18 miles. The cut is an average of 600 feet wide and ranges in depth from a few feet to 53 feet. The massive foundation for a bridge is well under way near Santos.

Man-hours of work on the project have totaled about 8,350,000. The payrolls have totaled over $1,980,000 and the total disbursements approximately $3,740,000. Allotments for the canal reached $5,400,000.

WHITE HOUSE FUNERAL IS PLANNED FOR HOWE

Services Will Be Held on Thursday; Washington Mourns Passing.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—(AP)—A White House funeral was planned tonight for Louis McHenry Howe, President Roosevelt's friend and political mentor for two decades.

Howe, 65, died last night in Naval hospital after more than a year's fight—much of it under an oxygen tent—against heart and chest complications.

The White House announced tonight, after the arrival of Howe's widow and son, that funeral services would be held at 3 p. m. (Atlanta time) Tuesday in the high-ceilinged east room, scene of many state functions. Burial will be at Fall River, Mass., Howe's hometown which he visited on the infrequent occasions when he left his "other home" at the White House.

It was understood no decision had been made by either the President nor Mrs. Roosevelt whether they would accompany the body to Fall River.

Expressions of Regret.

Expressions of regret came from leaders in public life who since early World War days had known Howe, first as an aid to the then youthful Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt, then as his political counselor while governor of New York and finally as his secretary at the White House.

Newton D. Baker, secretary of war while Mr. Roosevelt was a member of the "little cabinet," said of Howe: "His devotion to his country was his outstanding characteristic. His death is a great loss."

The President learned of his secretary's death when he returned to the White House from a dinner last night. Mrs. Roosevelt telephoned Mrs. Howe immediately.

In the 20-odd years since "Louie," as a newspaperman, had first explained the intricacies of politics to Mr. Roosevelt as a first-term member of the New York legislator, the little quiet-spoken Howe had become a member of the family.

To him, the President remained until the end only "Franklin" in personal salutation and "the boss" when referred to in talks with friends. Mrs. Roosevelt was "Eleanor."

Lived at White House.

Since 1932, Howe was constantly close to Mr. Roosevelt's office, living at the White House with an office only a few steps removed from that of the President.

After the election, Mr. Roosevelt in his first public utterance said Howe and Chairman James A. Farley, of the national committee more than anybody else, were responsible "for the great victory."

The friendship between the President and Howe started in Albany, N. Y., when Mr. Roosevelt was a youthful state senator and Howe a newspaper reporter.

When Mr. Roosevelt came to Washington as assistant secretary of the navy in the Wilson administration, Howe came with him. When Mr. Roosevelt made his unsuccessful race for the vice presidency in 1920, it was Howe who planned the campaign and picked the campaign aides.

Two of the aides were Stephen T. Early and Marvin McIntyre, now secretaries to the President.

Abandoned Own Affairs.

In the wake of the 1920 campaign when Mr. Roosevelt suffered an attack of infantile paralysis which threatened to end his political career if not his life, Howe stood by devotedly.

Abandoning his own affairs, Howe went to live with the Roosevelts. He was credited with convincing the President that, the physical handicap notwithstanding, a political career still was possible.

Howe held no title while Mr. Roosevelt was governor of New York, but he continued to give his political advice. Always he could see presidential possibilities for "the boss."

Because of his part in electing Mr. Roosevelt, Howe was called "Kingmaker," "Warwick," "Mystery Man" and "Politician Supreme."

More than a year ago his illness was so critical that hope was abandoned, but the veteran political strategist surprised physicians by stamina and his apparent recovery.

Last August when White House repairs necessitated cutting off of electricity and plumbing, Howe was removed to Naval hospital. The President made several trips to the hospital to visit his friend, the last only a few days ago.

Native of Indiana.

Although a native of Indiana—he was born in Indianapolis January 14, 1871—it was lifetime spent in close-up observation of New York politics that equipped him for the role he was to play.

He grew up in Saratoga, then as now visited frequently by politicians. His father ran a paper nad the son, naturally enough, drifted into the newspaper business and became correspondent for New York dailies. More than 30 years ago he went to Albany as correspondent for the old New York Herald.

The Albany post led to a friendship such as has rarely been known in American political history.

Since coming to Washington, Howe made his home in the White House where he was "one of the family." Everyone knew of "Louie" Howe, but few knew him intimately. He seldom left the White House at night and took no part in social life.

NEWS LEADERS GATHER FOR A. P. CONVENTION

NEW YORK, April 19.—(AP)—Hundreds of newspaper executives from all parts of the United States assembled here tonight on the eve of the one-day annual meeting of the Associated Press.

The 50th annual convention of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association will begin Tuesday and run through Friday.

Election of directors, reception of reports of the general manager and directorate, and committee activities are some of the major items on the program of the Associated Press.

Peak social occasion of the press association's meeting is a luncheon tomorrow at noon at which H. L. Mencken, editor and author, and Sir Wilmott Lewis, American correspondent of the London Times, are to speak.

Broader Scope Urged in Child Care Among Atlanta's Needy Families

Civic Leaders, Under Chest Sponsorship, To Conduct Survey for Assembly of Facts in Better Preparation of Children for June.

(Editor's note:. This is one of a series of articles dealing with the welfare needs of Atlanta and how the community is meeting them.)

By BOYCE M. EDENS,
Executive Director, Atlanta Community Chest.

Community leaders have been much concerned during recent months with the problem of caring adequately for children in need of the assistance and guidance that only community resources can give.

Children in unemployed families, in the families on the rolls of many of the agencies of relief and service, present unusual difficulties beyond the question of simple physical requirements.

Relief is not enough for these children growing up in abnormal circumstances. Yet their needs for understanding and recreation and the development of health and character, are often submerged to the paramount need for food, clothing and shelter.

Dangerous Future.

Leaders recognize that in this situation is being sown "a crop of social thistles" that may bear a thorny harvest of delinquency and crime and permanently warped lives in the not-so-distant future unless something can be done about it.

Something is being done about it in Atlanta. At the present time a group of civic leaders are preparing to conduct a careful study of the situation to assemble facts about the extent of the need and the things that must be done to meet it.

The necessity for such a study was recognized a few weeks ago by the child care and protection subcommittee of the budget committee of the Community Chest.

Broader Scope Urged.

In apportioning the funds subscribed by the people of Atlanta for child care, they found that the scope of the work must be broadened if the best job was to be done.

Their report said:

"It seems that, in general, we have developed quite extensive social services through the operation of public and private agencies for the care of children, very largely after they have become dependent, neglected or delinquent.

"But we do not have an agency or agencies set up exclusively for the strict protection of helpless children in our midst.

"In other words, we have been strong on remedial service for children but severely short on preventive service for them. We feel that in this respect the social forces of our community have overlooked an opportunity."

Survey Suggested.

The committee, of which C. L. Emerson was chairman, suggested a detailed survey of the whole field of child welfare work and asked that the survey group return definite recommendations to the chest board of directors.

Conditions change, and needs change. No plan can be set up that will be constantly workable and continuously effective. Welfare services must be adapted to the needs, and constant study and long-range planning is an essential part of the whole effort of trying to meet them.

We are beginning to recognize, however, that these preventive services for children of underprivileged families is one of the most important phases of the work. The realization that we are woefully short on services of this kind is the first step in doing something about it. But it is a long-time job and it needs the best thought of the community to work it out.

The children of the community hold the future in their hands. What kind of a city we shall have 30 years from now depends largely on the youngsters who are growing up now—growing up and learning every day, regardless of whether they have the opportunity of learning the right things or not.

15-YEAR-OLD RUNAWAY SURRENDERS TO POLICE

A 15-year-old girl who walked into Atlanta police headquarters Saturday night and told Captain G. Neal Ellis she was a runaway from Akron, Ohio, is being held pending arrangements for her return to the Ohio city.

The girl, who gave her name as Janet Haag, told Captain Ellis she left home about two months ago with two other girls. The trio became separated in Maryland, she said, and she struck out alone, traveling through West Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia and finally into Florida.

She obtained temporary work in Winter Haven, she said, and then hit the road again when she was discharged. When she reached Atlanta, she decided to tell police her story.

Captain Ellis yesterday received a telegram from P. R. Witwer, juvenile probation officer of Akron, and arrangements are being made for the girl's transportation. She is auburn-haired and appears to be about 19 years old, police said.

Cotton for dinner, supper and breakfast—between meals as well—saved the 11-month-old Jerry Strabel, of Ogden, Wash., from the surgeons knife here recently. He swallowed an open safety-pin which was eliminated through use of the cotton diet.

3 ENTOMBED MINERS ARE REPORTED ALIVE

alive and well. He sent up word there was no danger of the mine being flooded from water seeping through the mine levels.

But he said it was necessary to wade through the cold water to reach the communication pipe.

Mrs. Robertson and Mrs. Magill, so overcome they could scarcely speak, talked briefly with the men in the underground cavern.

"Hello, Herm, hello," said Mrs. Magill.

"Eddie, You There?"

"Eddie, you there?" said Mrs. Robertson.

Receiving an answer, she shouted, "Keep up your courage!"

Turning to the tired, dirt-covered miners who cheered about, she said, "Men, you are wonderful."

Mrs. Robertson said she had given up hope the night before.

W. H. Hannigan, a miner from Porcupine, Ontario, one of the rescue crew, declared, "We can keep them alive for six months if necessary."

Mine manager, F. D. Henderson, who is assisting Inspector J. P. Messervey in directing the rescue, sent down a written message directing the men to explore the eastern slope of the shaft to aid the rescue efforts.

In Two Days.

"Will have you up in two days," he wrote. "Keep up courage. Over 100 men working to get you up and government giving every aid. Tell the doctor and Magill love and kisses from Mrs. Magill and Mrs. Robertson."

The three men were unable to give any directions, however, as to where drilling operations would be most successful.

Once, after communication was established, alarm was felt that the men were drowning.

Henderson, leaning over the tube after water-proof material had been sent down, chafed at the delay of the three in emptying the container.

"Hello," he shouted, "why don't you unload?"

Then placing his ear to the line he heard rushing water, and horror stricken, he exclaimed, "There's water pouring in."

But soon, Scadding shouted that the seepage made it difficult to reach the line without getting wet, and that Dr. Robertson, carefully husbanding the strength of his two patients, "was keeping them away from the tube as much as possible."

Can't Hear Blasts.

He said they were unable to hear the blasting operations overhead.

Later, rubber hose was rushed to the mine by seaplane on order of Premier Macdonald so food could be sent the men without their getting wet.

Dr. Robertson reported what supplies were needed and drugs to counteract acidosis resulting from prolonged hunger, brandy, flashlights with extra batteries and bulbs, oilskins, saccharine and candles, besides food, were sent below.

In Toronto the news was received by Premier Mitchell Hepburn, of Ontario, who directed the dispatch of an airplane with long strips of wool to keep the men warm.

In Toronto churches' prayers of thanksgiving were offered.

NEW REVENUE PLANS NEAR HANDS OF HOUSE

paid or refunded AAA processing levies.

Revenue Goal.

No estimate of the actual revenue the bill would produce was available today, but the committee was aiming at $799,000,000. President Roosevelt had recommended a program that would finance the new farm subsidy and bonus pre-payment acts, in addition to recovering losses from the outlawing of the AAA.

While the senate, free from 11 days of an impeachment trial, resumes consideration of the Overton bill authorizing $275,000,000 for flood control work on the lower Mississippi river, a house appropriations subcommittee will continue efforts tomorrow to complete a deficiency bill carrying the $1,500,000,000 the President asked for WPA next year.

This request also faces a rocky road in the senate, where republicans and some democrats will seek a change in the present system of adminstering relief expenditures.

ATLANTA, GA., APRIL 20, 1936.

THE WRONG SLANT

Colonel Frank Knox, outspoken foe of the New Deal, recently visited Texas to make some speeches and confer with leaders of the G. O. P. in that state. Judging by newspaper accounts, Colonel Knox, who is publisher of the Chicago Daily News, was given a warm reception, with columns of newspaper publicity and photographs, but whether he succeeded in lining up any delegates remains to be seen.

In the course of one of his speeches, according to the Dallas News, Colonel Knox is quoted as saying:

If I were living in Texas I'd shout the republican policies from the housetops. What has the New Deal done for you? It has taken your foreign cotton market away—something that will never be regained.

To which statement Peter Molyneaux, editor and publisher of the Texas Weekly, takes exception, saying:

We say this is loose language, because it is not true that it was the New Deal that took our foreign cotton market away, and we think it is rather too cocksure to say that our foreign cotton market "never will be regained." It was in the cotton year of 1930-31 that foreign consumption of Americar cotton hit the low mark of 35 per cent of all the cotton consumed outside the United States, and that was the first year since the Civil War that the world consumed more foreign cotton than American cotton. It is true that world consumption of American cotton in 1934-35 was very low, only 11,314,000 bales, but in 1930-31 it was less than that, being 11,113,000 bales. There have been a few other years in recent times when consumption of American cotton in the world was lower, but aside from the two years when the United States was in the World War, these other years have been under republican administrations.

Mr. Molyneaux then proceeds to show how the price of cotton continued to go lower until on July 31 it was at the lowest level in 28 years, and Mr. Hoover's Federal Farm Board sent frantic telegrams to governors of cotton-growing states calling upon them to mobilize every available agency to induce immediate plowing under of every third row of cotton then growing. He further shows that it was about this time that the "blessings" of the Hawley-Smoot tariff law began to be realized, culminating in retaliatory action by more than 40 foreign countries, which destroyed international trade.

It is clear that the policies of the republican administrations from Harding to Hoover brought about economic conditions which finally resulted in the volcanic blow-up in 1929.

We join Editor Molyneaux in saying: "We cannot see any appropriate occasion to 'shout republican policies from the housetops.'" Rather should any and all candidates for the republican presidential nomination busy themselves in evolving and then presenting a better program than the New Deal, instead of condemning it in "loose language."

Several republican leaders, men who are not now in the running, even as "dark horses," have roundly denounced wholesale condemnation of the New Deal and lack of a concrete program. Just last week, Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, declared:

The republican party cannot win merely by abusing the New Deal. You cannot beat something with nothing. To win, the republican party must offer the reliable promise of an administration sincerely and effectively devoted to the greatest good of the greatest number, honestly bound to the welfare of the plain people, and earnestly determined to make the public good come first.

The record of the republican party discloses that its policies have not been along those lines. The "old guard," which has determined its policies in the past, its still dominant, so there is no hope of a change in the immediate future. After three years of benefits under the New Deal it is not likely that the voters of the nation will desire to discard it for the questionable conditions that would obtain under republican misrule.

THE COLUMBUS MEMORIAL

Announcement is made from the Washington headquarters of the Pan-American Union that in the near future national committees will be appointed in each nation of North and South America to direct the raising of a fund for the erection of the proposed Columbus memorial lighthouse in the Dominican Republic.

The suggestion of this memorial was first advanced by the International Conference of American States, when a resolution was adopted by the representatives of all American republics recommending that "the governments of the American republics honor the memory of Christopher Columbus by the erection of a monumental lighthouse which will bear his name on the coast at Santo Domingo, capital of the Dominican Republic, and which shall be built with the co-operation of the governments and people of America."

Decision to place the memorial in the Dominican Republic was based on the fact that because Columbus' known affection for it has caused it to be called "the land Columbus loved," that there he experienced his greatest triumphs and deepest sorrows, that there his remains are buried, and that there his son, Diego, built the Columbus home in the New World, the remains of which still stand.

The design for the memorial—a lighthouse in the form of a giant recumbent cross of the type known as the "Columbus Cross"—was selected from 455 drawings submitted from 48 countries by an international jury of award meeting at Madrid, Spain. It is the work of J. L. Gleave, of England, who describes the significance of the design as follows:

The monument is intended to represent the increasing, irresistible surge of the world through the centuries sweeping toward the light. . . . The great mass shoots forward, upward. Civilization always travels westward, as did Columbus. When it reaches the tomb it turns north and south to both the Americas, and from it radiate fan-shaped, 21 roads, one for each of the Pan-American republics.

The Dominican government has set aside a magnificent park in which the memorial is to be erected and has defrayed the expenses involved in the preliminary organization work and the selection of the design.

The project has been formally indorsed by every American government, the concurrent resolution adopted by the United States house and senate declaring that "the United States approves the international project advocated by the Pan-American conference and recommends that the several states participating in that conference be notified of the desire of the people of the United States to participate in this movement to honor the memory of the great navigator and discoverer."

No estimate has been placed upon the cost of the memorial but it is expected that, while large, the amount needed can easily be raised, as many nations will participate in the undertaking.

In the United States, there should be general and liberal response when the campaign for funds is launched.

Hollywood Today

BY SHEILAH GRAHAM.

HOLLYWOOD, April 19.—Ronald Colman and a man friend were dining tranquilly at an unfrequented Hollywood restaurant recently, when up popped a cameraman who took several "Candid Camera" shots of the startled actor and departed—on the run. Mr. Colman, highly indignant, sent for the manager.

"I came here for a quiet meal," he complained angrily. "Is there no place in this town where I can eat without ducking photographers all the time?"

Since the incident, Mr. Colman has eaten at home. He is only one of many long-established celebrities to declare war against the growing, unauthorized exploitation of film stars by publicity agents and camermen attached to every restaurant and hotel from here to as far afield as Palm Springs.

Kahtarine Hepburn rarely dines in public restaurants because of the attendant unwelcome publicity paragraphs and photographs.

Sylvia Sidney and Miriam Hopkins have a phobia against being photographed sans studio make-up, and never enter a restaurant unless the manager promises protection against the cameraman pest.

Clark Gable, Charlie Chaplin, Jeanette MacDonald and the Fredric Marches are other stars who stay at home because of a preference to eat like human beings instead of putting on a "Goldfish-in-a-Bowl" act for their admirers.

The vogue for "star" exploitation by restaurateurs in the past, has resulted, Frankenstein fashion, in destroying, one after another, the places employing this method of bringing in the tourist trade. The Montmartre, Casanova, Embassy Club, John and Frank's, the Colony Club and the King's Club are only a few of the overpublicized places within the last few years to fold shortly after opening.

At the moment, the Trocadero, situated on the "Strip"—the one-time location of gambling hells and houses of ill-repute—is the most popular dance and dinner place with the handful of stars who step out, and the thousands of rubbernecks who willingly pay exorbitant food charges for the pleasure of touching elbows with Louis B. Mayer, an almost nightly visitor; Cesar Romero, who tries to mystify the publicity boys and columnists by escorting Virginia Bruce one night and Betty Furness the next; Bill Powell, Jean Harlow, Joe Schenck, Darryl Zanuck, Bert Wheeler, Alice Faye, Walter Wanger and a dozen others ranging from stars to second featured leads.

The most regular attendant is Photographer Hymie Fink, famous for winning a $100 wager from Katharine Hepburn by sneaking a picture during her last flight to New York.

There are two reasons for the popularity of the "Troc." First and foremost, it is owned by Billy Wilkerson, publisher of the Hollywood Reporter, the most widely read daily trade paper in Hollywood. One of its columns is devoted to trivia and chit-chat. By a strange coincidence, anything from one-half to one-third of its subject matter is devoted entirely to publicizing the stars, producers and directors who were "among those present last night, listening with enjoyment to Phil Ohman's music at the "Troc."

Reason two is that the food at the "Troc," while by no means the best in town, is the most expensive—a potent sales argument to those who believe that money and exclusiveness go together. A friend of the writer recently entertained a party of four. The meal was simple—soup, chops, dessert and a light table wine. The check, he reported was $45. Another time, he paid $60 for feeding five. The fact that Dolores Del Rio occupied a near-by table somehow failed to console him.

Before the advent of the "Troc" in September, 1934, the Cocoanut Grove, established since 1921 in the Ambassador hotel, was the place for film stars and fans. Tuesday night was—and still is—"Celebrity Night," only nowadays the celebrities are either at the "Troc" or at home in bed.

The overdose of publicity responsible for he Grove's popularity wane among the stars, was also one of the reasons its predecessor, the Alexandria hotel, in downtown Los Angeles, lost out in celebrity patronage.

The Biltmore Bowl, open since May, 1934, is one of the few places where stars can eat and dance in comparative peace. Unless the occasion is the Screen Actors Ball, or the Academy Awards Dinner, candid cameramen, autograph hounds and gaping watchers are kept at bay by the roped-off entrance at which policemen are stationed. With the result that Mr. and Mrs. Edward Arnold, the Joe Penners, Harold Lloyd and his wife, Maureen O'Sullivan, Johnny Farrow, the Warren Williams and the Dick Arlens are among the "regular" famous film folk who prefer to spend time and money in the gigantic ballroom.

The Vendome—opened in April, 1933, and under the same management as the "Troc"—is notable for its luncheon array of stars—Marlene Dietrich can be viewed daily, along with producers and directors—food that ranks with the best in Hollywood, and the sidewalk queue of approximately 100 who waylay celebrities for autographs. The same policy of publicizing "names" in the Hollywood Reporter rules at the Vendome, thereby assuring the restaurant's longevity—that is, as long as the magazine remains in the hands of Mr. Wilkerson.

Autograph hounds are absent from the Cafe Lamaze, chiefly because of its isolated position on Hollywood's "strip." But their nonappearance is compensated for by a highly competent publicity man. Movie gentlemen and their girl friends who go there to escape the all-seeing eyes of the paragraphists invariably read about their "hot romance" in the next day's newspapers. Among those whose "love" for each other was created by a harmless meal at the Cafe Lemaze are Jeanette Macdonald-Gene Raymond, Wendy Barrie-Louis Hayward, Allan Jones-Irene Hervey.

The famous trio of brown derbys—Wilshire (opened 1926), Vine Street (1929), and Beverly (1931)—are not as popular as they were because of the general withdrawal from the restaurant to the home, but the good food, especially the corned beef hash, and the Bohemian atmosphere bring regular patrons within the film-star-caricature-lined walls—particularly on Thursdays, "the cook's night out." These include Marlene Dietrich with her husband and/or Willis Goldbeck (Beverly); George Raft, the Warner Boys (Vine Street)—they are heavy stockholders in the company); Carole Lombard, who unashamedly enjoys publicity, and recently was hostess at the opening of the Bamboo Cocktail Room (Vine Street), and the Mark Brothers (Beverly).

The Clover Club, beginning where the Montmartre left off, is probably the only dining and dancing place in Hollywood that not only is minus a press department for exploitation of itself through film stars, but actually discourages all forms of publicity. The proprietor evidently feels the sport of gambling can get along by itself, without making known the presence of celluloid star habitues. And, to judge by the crowds that linger until 6 and 7 in the morning, his policy is 100 per cent right.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

BY PAUL MALLON.

RUMOR MONGERING WASHINGTON, April 19.—A congressional authority is digging up data on rumor factories. He intends to have one of the congressional investigating committees look into the matter. Also, it would not be surprising if he gets some help from the Justice Department shortly.

His advance information indicates there are no fewer than three or four organizations which will start a malicious rumor over the country for you at a price. Two of these outfits are said to maintain respectable fronts. They were originally organized for merchandising purposes and got into rumor mongering as a sideline.

One of the group is supposed to have started that malicious whisper about a certain brand of cigarettes some months back. Their latest products are fantastic whisperings that there was something wrong about the deaths of Governor Ritchie, James M. Beck and one or two other prominent opponents of the New Deal who have died recently. They seem to have avoided President Roosevelt as a subject during the last few months.

Proof against them is very hard to get, but there are now inner indications that they will not be in business long.

GULLIBILITY To show you how foolishly people follow rumors:

The Securities and Exchange Commission now is pursuing a financial house and 14 co-defendants for hiring agents to go around the country circulating rumors about a certain stock. The agents received $10 to $25 per 100 shares to make a market for the stock merely with whispers. They went to different cities and spread the word in right places about what a good thing it was. Gullible persons increased the daily volume of purchases six times over and drove the price up 50 per cent so the big shots could get out at a profit.

At least this is the government side of the story, and it has been done before.

APPRAISAL Businessmen seem to know more about politics now than they did before and during the depression. More of them seem to have an understandable knowledge of practical prospects.

For instance, one of the top-notchers, who cannot be quoted, has this practical slant on the political outlook:

If business fights hard, Mr. Roosevelt can be beaten, but if it temporizes he will win.

With some improvement in business and some modification of extreme New Deal policies, this businessman, as an anti-New Dealer, fears that business will now begin to pull its punches and lose interest.

BUYING POWER A new kind of model campaign speech is that of Senator Logan, entitled "Why Kentucky Is For the New Deal."

It was inserted in the Congressional Record (without reading) April 9 by the senate democratic floor leader.

Mr. Logan's appeal to reason is almost entirely the fact that the New Deal dropped $227,000,000 of federal donations into Kentucky. He gives names and amounts of each item in millions, including:- AAA $20,000,000, CCC $23,000,000, direct relief $36,000,000, CWA $9,000,000, PWA $30,000,000, etc., etc.

NOTES The New Dealers have tired of the Van Nuys bill proposing heavy penalties for businessmen who influence the vote of their employes. It is being quietly strangled in the house judiciary committee because it is a little too raw. What made them realize it was a counter proposal to prevent federal officials from doing the same thing.

The long look you may have noticed on Senator Wheeler's face is due to the fact that he could not get anything but an upper tier seat for the opening game, and, when seated, he saw through a spy glass that his secretary was sitting in a front box near the President.

The old Japanese scare is being used regularly by the Filipias in their current campaign to repeal economic barriers here. Despite the auspicious start of the new Philippine commonwealth and praise of the United States for freeing the islands, the possibility of strained relations between Washington and Manila is quite strong.

The veterans' lobby, flushed by victory in bonus legislation, has just about given up hope for the universal draft (passed by the senate, now in the house). A recent canvas of the legislative situation convinced an American Legion committee that it would not get through this session.

You will see plenty of Mr. Roosevelt's face in the news reels from now on. Eight separate presidential appearances were photographed by reelers betwcen April 8 and 16.

A lot of rich democrats are already being "mentioned" backstage as special ambassador to the coronation of Edward VIII in May, 1937. Apparently it is hoped that all will help their chances by making substantial contributions to Postmaster General Farley's campaign fund.

SILHOUETTES

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Warm sun shining, blossoms gay,
Birds a'singing, seem to say,
Summertime is here to stay—
Get out the old lawn swing.

Winter's over, cold days gone,
Joytime reigns forever on,
Time your summer rags to don,
Get out the old white pants.

Grass a'growin', furnace cold,
Blue jays gettin' mighty bold,
Lovers pettin', so I'm told,
Get out and laugh once more.

Songs Punctuate A Liftetime.

Thinking today of the old popular songs, the tunes that have been sung by the nation for their own brief span, been forgotten and lost in the limbo of the good old days.

Heard a radio singer this morning baritoning that ballad of Spanish-American War days, "Goodbye, My Bluebell," which started the chain of melodious recollections.

Earliest childhood memories recall "The Man Who Broke the Bank of Monte Carlo," "Ta ra ra ra Boom de Ay," and "Sipping Cider Through a Straw." Do you remember these?

Later came "Hiawatha," "Just Break the News to Mother," "Two Little Girls in Blue," "After the Ball." And, in England, "Soldiers of the Queen."

Songs Were Songs In Those Days.

Songs were really songs in those days. There was usually some meaning to the words, the melodies were easily memorized and there was a tunefulness and rhythm that haunted.

How about "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree," "I Was Only Teasing You" and "Take Me Out to the Ball Game?" Then there was "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now." "What's the Use of Dreaming" and "The Time, the Place and the Girl."

"I'm Afraid to Go Home in the Dark," "I Love My Wife but Oh, You Kid," and "My Wife's Gone to the Country, Hooray."

And the western group.

"Pony Boy," "Cheyenne" and "San Antonio," for instance.

The songs that Blanche Ring used to sing:

"I've Got Bells on My Fingers," "Yip-I-Addy-I-Ay-I-Ay" and "Make Hay-Hay."

Coming Down The Years.

Two songs always associated in memory are "Ragging the Baby to Sleep" and "Ragtime Cowboy Joe."

Irving Berlin gave us "Alexander's Ragtime Band" about that time and there was another favorite, something about "The Ghost of the Violin."

World War time brought about plenty. From England "Tipperary," "Pack Up Your Troubles" and "Keep the Home Fires Burning."

George Cohan's "Over There," and "Oh, Boy How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning," "There's a Long, Long Trail," "Katie," etc., etc.

Hits From Musical Comedy.

Haven't made mention of songs that came from the musical comedies.

"Chin, Chin Chinaman," "Dream, Oh My Dearest," and the Goldfish song from the Country Girl.

"Give My Regards to Broadway," "Mary Is a Grand Old Name" and other Cohan triumphs.

Then there are the hits of the old English music halls.

"The Midnight Son," "She Is My Donah," "Lulu, Are You Coming Out Tonight," "I May Be Crazy But I Love You."

The Harry Lauder songs and all those dear, remembered tunes from the Gilbert & Sullivan operas, from Victor Herbert and, later, from Sigmund Romberg.

Life has been quite generous in popular music, hasn't it, despite the latter day atrocities of "Hi-De-Hi" and "Boop-a-Da-Boop" and "Swing?"

Come out to the house sometime and let's play back over the span. I'll play and you sing. That would be better.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

Hope they made just lots of money.

From The Constitution of Thursday April 20, 1911:

"St. Anthony church, out in West End, is now keeping open house on the second floor of the Emery-Steiner building, on the viaduct, off from Whitehall street, the lady members of that parish having opened an up-to-date bazar, whereby they hope to add a materia} sum to the building fund for the new church."

And Fifty Years Ago.

Well, who'd want to go out Ponce de Leon in winter, anyway?

From The Constitution of Tuesday, April 20, 1886:

"The Gate City street car line have put into effect their summer schedule, and the cars now make regular trips to the springs at Ponce de Leon. There are many visitors every afternoon."

Talmudic Tales

BY DAVID MORANTZ.

Number 301.

(Based upon the legends and philosophy found in the Talmud, which work contains the civic and canonical laws and traditions of the Jewish people, dating back as far as 3,000 years.)

BEWARE OF THE HYPOCRITE!

Before King Jannai died he said to his faithful wife, Queen Salome:

"My beloved wife, I feel that I am about to die. Our son is too young to rule in my place so I shall leave my kingdom in your hands. Before I go, let me tell you the secret that will enable you to rule with wisdom and justice. I want you to remember this one thing and you will find it much easier to rule the kingdom. Remember always that men are not to be judged by the color of their skin nor by their religion nor their political affiliations."

"Then how are they to be judged?" she asked.

"There are two classes of people," he went on. "There is that class that is good and honest and there is that class that is wicked and hypocritical. Fear not the honest men of any faith or political party but beware of the hypocrites!"

Due to the extensive interest in Talmudic Tales, 128 of the legends and over 500 pearls of wisdom have been collected in an attractive book of 195 pages, handsomely bound in grained blue vellum cloth, with gold-stamped title. Autographed by author. Suitable for gifts or prizes. Price $1.50 postpaid. Address orders to "Talmudic Tales," care The Atlanta Constitution.

FAIR ENOUGH

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Routine Executions. NEW YORK, April 19.—Two young men were quietly executed in Sing Sing Thursday night for murdering a man who had picked them up on the road to give them a lift in his car. The double execution was a routine event and was given just enough space in the papers to tell the plain facts of the story. The victim of the murder was a man of no prominence, the crime showed no ingenuity and the two killers drove straight into the arms of the law in the dead man's car a few hours later.

They didn't have brains enough to realize that the alarm would be telegraphed to thousands of policemen within a radius of several hundred miles. It was a cheap murder and a cheap execution and a hundred words was sufficient to tell the final chapter of the story, although the torture of the men in their last hours and the sufferings of their relatives doubtless were just as awful as the anguish of the principals in any of the big, famous cases.

The execution of Bruno Hauptmann, on the other hand, was an event of international importance and the press of European countries subject, of course, to the iron control of the censors in some of them, gave it all there was. American public opinion, however, seems to have choked on the dreadful details of Hauptmann's last hours and of the tragic experience of his wife and child. There are those who believe the press could have put a kindlier face on a revolting occurrence.

But the emphasis, or overemphasis, if you insist, on the Hauptmann case was a response to the public interest which lays down the rules by which editors gauge their space and treatment of big stories.

Alternative Courage. Let us suppose that on the night the Lindbergh child was kidnaped the New York papers and the press associations had decided to cover the story as a minor incident, sending out no staff men to the Lindbergh home to make inquiries of their own. Suppose, instead, that they relied on country correspondents and had printed the news back near the goiters and electric belts, as the old phrase goes, in no more words than it takes to say that the child of a well-known flyer disappeared from his crib in a house on a lonely mountain and that a ransom note was found.

There is no further news of the case until some time later when a fussy old man delivers $50,000 in currency to a mysterious figure amid the shadows of the tombs in a cemetery at night. That, too, is told in just enough space to contain the facts and the treatment in the same when the body of the child is found and the kidnaping becomes a murder. Next we have the arrest of a man with some of the money in his pockets and the discovery of $15,000 more cached in the garage of his home. Now comes the trial and, eventually, after many delays and much gruesome nonsense on the part of public officials and notorious eccentrics with a love of personal publicity, the formal execution of the murderer.

Editorial Insanity. The entire story of the Lindbergh-Hauptmann case could be told in less than a column, but any editor who had undertaken to play it that way would have been fired from his job and adjudged insane. Not only his employers, the owners of the paper, but the readers themselves, who are the public, would have demanded thousands of columns of detail and description, and the fact that they did get all there was to be had down to Bruno Hauptmann's last hours on earth is merely an indication of their interest.

Naturally, some papers handled the story with less tact than others, but those papers have their public, too, and if some people prefer their news raw and sensational why shouldn't they have it that way? The people who elect themselves to a nice, superior class are forever pulling wrinkled snoots at the kind with dirt under their finger nails for the way they take their pleasures, although their pleasures are just about alike in the long run. A dignified story of the Hauptmann execution and a howling, wild-eyed account leading off with the old reliable news that stark tragedy stalked the cold grey corridors of Trenton prison, both convey the idea that a live human being was strapped in a wooden chair and lifted out dead five minutes later. Is there any language on earth which could make of that information the sweetest story ever told?

Execution's Tragedies. Executions aren't nice and there is always some wretched wife, husband or mother waiting in a hotel near the prison whose suffering is worst of all. The most horrible personal disaster I ever heard of was that of a mother who lost not one son, but two, in the electric chair at Sing Sing ten years ago. True, they had it coming, if you believe in capital punishment, but the mother didn't. This had been a spectacular crime, followed by smart detective work and strong prosecution, so the treatment of the case in the papers was measured to meet the poplar demand, which was eager and great.

There is never a story so big, however, but that a bigger one can sweep it out of sight. In 1913, Omaha was blown to splinters by a spring tornado and the details were just beginning to trickle in over crippled wires when the Ohio river went crazy, flooding the city of Dayton and washing the debris of the Omaha story out of print in 24 hours.

If France had declared war on Germany the night of the Hauptmann execution, the story of the carpenter's finish would have been shoved deep inside and might have been left on the stone.

It Isn't His Horns That Make a Bull Feared, But the Hate in His Rumbling Bellow

By ROBERT QUILLEN

An experienced traveler, writing in the Geographic magazine, describes a trip through Japan, where the people made him a welcome guest in their homes.

He won their good will simply by regarding them as people, treating them as equals, and respecting their customs.

The ordinary traveler is disliked because he considers himself a superior and makes no effort to conceal his contempt for the land and its people.

When Dickens wrote a book about his first visit to America, and told how congressmen and other notables sprinkled the White House carpets with tobacco juice, all Americans hated and reviled him.

We can understand and approve that feeling, yet it does not occur to us that other races react in the same way when criticized by Americans.

Our explanation is that we, being superior beings, have a natural right to criticize others, while they are insultingly impudent when they venture to criticize their betters. Unfortunately, they reverse this arrangement of values and expect as much consideration as we do.

With few exceptions, all races of men—even the naked savages—are hospitable and friendly to strangers so long as they are treated with courtesy and respect. They ask only a decent consideration for their dignity and pride.

Lawrence won Arabia by treating the natives as equals, and England holds her colonies by respecting the sacred customs of the people.

The art of keeping peace with a race is precisely the same as the art of living at peace with a next-door neighbor.

Whether rich or poor, learned or unlearned, your next-door neighbor has pride and tender feelings. If you dislike and despise him, and if you criticize his way of life and call him hard names, either in his hearing or to a third person who will repeat what you say, he will regard you as an enemy and a menace.

And though you denounce the makers of weapons and all who profit by strife, and though you preach sweet peace until you are blue in the face, he will continue to hate and fear and distrust you so long as your speech reveals the unfriendliness and contempt in your heart.

Peace is not established by treaties, but in the hearts of the people. And the one certain way to live at peace with any people is to quit insulting them and treat them with decent and friendly courtesy.

HEALTH TALKS

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY

The removal of noncancerous moles and warts from the face calls for the finest skill of the surgeon. Individuals of limited intelligence may be willing to submit to the miracle workers of the market place, the barbers, beauty "doctors" and self-commended plastic surgery institutes, but those who value their personal appearance, comfort and safety invariably select a physician or surgeon of repute to treat any such blemish.

To me, a wart on my own skin would be mildly interesting, but a wart on the skin of a potential patient has always been irritating. I'd better explain this, so you won't be puzzled about it. It is simply that I never learned the proper management of warts. Nine times out of ten my advice, if sought at all, was curbstoned out of me. Caught between my office and my buggy by the casual passerby—it was extraordinary how many of them just happened to be strolling by—and confronted with a trifling wart, what could I do? Mutter about the danger of cancer, blood-poisoning, lockjaw? The blighter would recoil in righteous horror and start a whispering questioning my mental state or hinting that I was hitting the dope. A medical practitioner has only to brush the fur of such a cat the wrong way to fan into flame the ever-smouldering suspicion that he uses dope.

I learned, too late, the key to the wart problem. I offer it here to young doctors who, I suppose, are still more or less subject to the curbstone evil, though such customers are in danger of being picked up as pan-handlers in these days of fast cruising. This is the secret: No such thing as a wart. The lesion is always verruca. "My dear man, take my advice and have that verruca removed immediately. Come to the office tomorrow."

There you have him. He can't grumble. You've really gone out of your way to do him a favor, giving him a kindly warning against trifling with a potentially dangerous lesion. There's a fair chance he may decide to see it through, even if costs him a fee. Whereas, under the old custom, who ever heard of a doctor demanding a fee for just telling a person what to put onto a wart?

That's why warts irritate me so. They're like weak ankles in that respect. Took me many years to learn that weak ankles are in fact pronated feet.

Physician who have enjoyed success in dealing with such cosmetic blemishes as moles and warts report the most satisfactory results from the use of trichloracetic acid (a caustic far too dangerous for the layman to trifle with) followed after a minute or two by electro-desiccation (diathermy)—the escharotic action of the trichloracetic acid having a sufficient anesthetic effect to make the whole treatment tolerable without any other local anesthetic.

For removing a wart along the edge of the eyelid, where the escharotic would be unsafe, the favored method is to inject under the skin of the lid a 2 per cent butyn solution, and then desiccation with the endothermy or diathermy.

Not only moles and warts, but other small lesions are successfully treated with these methods, notably small "corns," scars, vascular nevi or "birthmarks," fibromas and horny nodules.

STEEL AND FLOWERS.

Steadman Burgess was taking me through a local steel mill the other day en route to the galvanizing department where he had generously and graciously arranged to have the set of horse shoes with which a group of us have played for the past six years treated with all the modern trimmings of galvanization so they will not rust up every time it rains.

We had just started down into the mammoth grounds when I stopped him to ask if we were in a steel mill or a botanical garden. Frankly, I haven't seen quite such a lovely exhibit of fine planning and cultivation of every imaginable sort of flower and shrubbery in a long while. Vistas of exquisite rock-ledged banks, blanketed with gorgeous bursts of color, seem to beckon you on and on through the acres of buildings and railroad tracks and all that goes to make up the setting of a steel plant.

Just then Mr. Burgess called to a gentleman in one of the superintendents' offices, and introduced me to him, Mr. Ed Schukraft, of the hoop mill, declaring that Ed is the boy who knows how to mix steel and flowers to the edification of the 1,200 men who work in that plant. Mr. Schukraft took up in tow from that time forward, bringing his associate superintendent, Mr. Krueger, into the party with the explanation that they worked together in their flower program as well as their steel program.

I saw the finest specimens of roses, dahlias, peonies, snapdragons, delphinium, begonias, geraniums, petunias, sweet peas, pansies, flox, verbenas, cannas, and on and on through the long list of the really fine flowers. And then some of the rarest types of shrubbery I have seen in a long time. They have their own greenhouses and their hot beds in which they grow all their annuals.

Yes, we got the horse shoes galvanized—a very interesting process to observe—but the thing I shall never forget about that trip through that steel mill is the art of blending steel and flowers to the delight of all who may ever pass that way.

OFF THE RECORD - By Ed Reed

"Looks like we'll have to skip school today—there's no place to park!"

Jesse James.

In 1882 another legend was born. Authorities and most of the people of St. Joseph, Mo., believed that Jesse James was shot in the back by two of his pals, Robert and Charles Ford, who were anxious to collect the $10,000 reward on his head.

However, years later it was told about that Bob and Charles enabled Jesse to escape to Arizona by shooting a tramp and hoaxing authorities into believing it was the body of Jesse. Arizonans even today believe that the "dead" Jesse James ranched for many years on the Gila river as Jesse Williams.

After Jesse's death or disappearance, his brother in crime, Frank, became a detective!

Military Pensions.

In 1790 congress began its endless legislation of benefits for men from the army and navy. It passed an act providing pensions for disabled soldiers. Since then soldier and sailor pensions have cost the United States government more than wars!

But pensions in this country didn't begin in 1790. Exactly 300 years ago this year the council of Plymouth colony decreed that whosoever should set forth as a soldier and returned maimed should be maintained by the colony for the rest of his life.

INDICTMENTS SOUGHT IN HAMM KIDNAP CASE

At Least Seven Persons Face Charges, U. S. Officials Say.

ST. PAUL, April 19.—(AP)—Indictment of at least seven persons on charges of participating in the $100,000 William Hamm kidnaping will be sought when a grand jury convenes Tuesday, federal authorities said tonight.

As George F. Sullivan, United States district attorney, prepared the case, federal agents pressed their hunt for Alvin Karpis, America's public enemy No. 1, as leader of the kidnap band.

Besides Karpis, the others for whom indictments will be asked included:

John (Jack) Peifer, St. Paul gambler and night club operator, named as the "fingerman."

Edmund C. Bartholmey, 42-year-old Bensenville, Ill., postmaster whose home was named by Hamm as the "hideout" where he was held prisoner four days.

Charles (Big Fitz) Fitzgerald, accused as the man who accosted Hamm June 15, 1933, and clasped his hand as two others, with guns, forced him into a car.

Bolton Awaits Sentence.

Bryan Bolton, better known as Byron (Machine Gun) Bolton, who pleaded guilty to complicity in the Edward G. Bremer kidnaping and awaits sentence.

Elmer Farmer, Bensenville tavern keeper, sentenced to 20 years for a part in the Bremer abduction.

Arthur (Doc) Barker, named by officials as coleader with Karpis in the Bremer and Hamm kidnapings, serving a life term in Alcatraz prison.

Fitzgerald, arrested in Los Angeles several days ago, was en route to St. Paul. Peifer and Bartholmey are held in the Ramsay county jail here. Peifer was arrested in a Minneapolis garage Friday and Bartholmey in Bensenville the same day.

A Mankato, Minn., woman who is an acquaintance of Fitzgerald, and Morris Roisner, liquor store owner, are held as material witnesses. Roisner's counsel said he would seek his release on bail Monday.

Clues Are Sought.

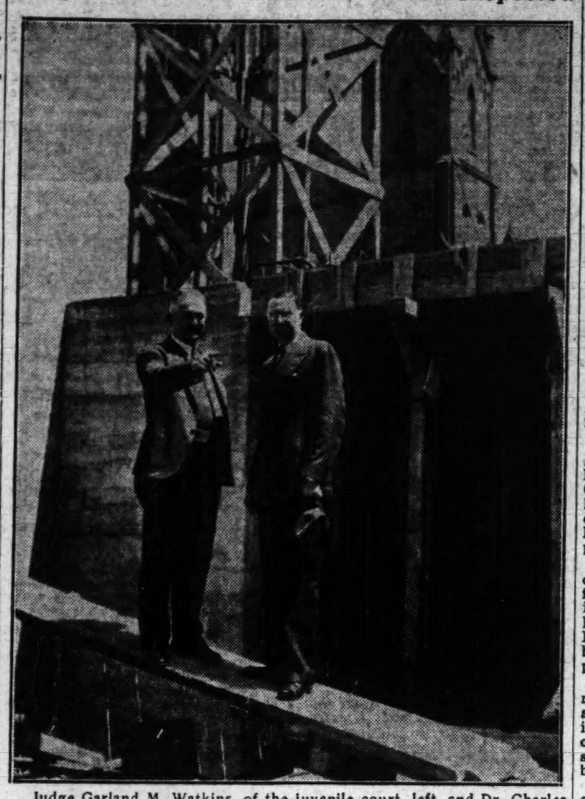

Federal officers said Roisner had no part in the abduction but hoped to establish through him certain activities of Peifer, a friend.

Bartholmey pleaded innocent before Federal Judge M. M. Joyce Saturday and was remanded to jail in lieu of $100,000 bail. He entered his plea with the understanding it could be changed after the grand jury reported.

In Washington Saturday, J. Edgar Hoover, head of the federal bureau of investigation, said the department had "definitely ascertained" the Hamm kidnaping was engineered by Karpis, "Doc" Barker, Fitzgerald, Bolton, Fred Barker, brother of "Doc," and Fred (Shotgun Zeigler) Goetz. The latter two are dead.

Peifer was known to have been a close friend of Goetz, frequently mentioned as the "brains" of the kidnap gang. Goetz, named by the government as one of the principals in the Bremer kidnaping, was slain by gangsters in Chicago a few months after the Bremer kidnaping. Fred Barker was killed by federal agents in a battle at Oklawaha, Fla., last year.

Progress on New Juvenile Home Inspected

Judge Garland M. Watkins, of the juvenile court, left, and Dr. Charles Ross Adams, chairman of the county commission, are shown as they inspected progress on the new Fulton Juvenile Detention Home. The home is being erected with county and WPA money. Dr. Adams told Judge Watkins the building will be completed as rapidly as possible no matter what happens. It is located in the rear of the courthouse, facing Central avenue. Staff photo by George Cornett.

JUVENILE HOME WORK IS PUSHED

New Building Expected To Be Completed by October at Latest.

Fulton county's new juvenile detention home is being completed as rapidly as possible, according to Dr. Charles R. Adams, chairman of the county commission, and Judge Garland M. Watkins, of the juvenile court.

Dr. Adams and Judge Watkins inspected the work.

The new home, with the foundations almost finished, is expected to be ready for occupancy by October at the latest.

The county and WPA are erecting the building at a cost of $85,000, of which sum Fulton will furnish $27,000. Practically all the materials have been purchased and are on the grounds now.

"Whatever happens, the juvenile home will be constructed as soon as possible," said Dr. Adams. "We are in postion now to carry on with the work and we expect to push the project forward as rapidly as we can."

A medical clinic, juvenile court offices, administrative offices, and a home for juveniles will be included in the new building.

If you grease the measuring cup lightly before measuring molasses, it will be a good deal easier to get it out of the cup.

LOBBY PROBERS WEIGH PUBLIC FUND APPEAL

Several Lawyers Volunteer To Argue Case on Publisher's Injunction.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—(AP)—The senate lobby committee disclosed today it was considering a "request" that the public be asked to contribute funds to pay legal expenses in fighting injunction proceedings brought by William Randolph Hearst, the publisher.

Committee members, while declining to name those who made the "request," said also that several lawyers had volunteered to argue the case without pay.

The lawyers came forward, they added, after the house voted down last week a resolution making $10,000 immediately available for legal hire. The committee now is considering also a plan to amend a regular departmental appropriation bill to provide the funds.

Hearst lost in the supreme court of the District of Columbia in an effort to obtain an injunction restraining the committee from examining his telegrams. His lawyer, Elisha Hanson, has announced the ruling will be appealed to the United States supreme court if necessary.

Colonel Crampton Harris, of Birmingham, Ala., represented the senate in the Hearst litigation. So far, it was said, he has not been placed on the pay roll and is continuing to serve without compensation. He has been given expense money.

The resolution to appropriate $10,000 was introduced and passed by the senate because the present law limits compensation for committee employes to $3,600 a year.

The committee was originally granted $50,000 with which to make its investigation. Subsequently another $12,500 was granted. Committee members said today that they have enough money "for the time being."

KENTUCKIAN IS KILLED AS AUTO HITS TRAIN

HARRODSBURG, Ky., April 19.—(AP)—Fred Harlow, 32, was killed here today when an automobile in which he was riding rammed a freight train. William Yates, 21, who was driving, was seriously hurt. His brother, Claud, 19, and Charles Baker, 30, were bruised and shaken up.

The automobile crashed into the train at a crossing and was dragged two squares before the wreckage was shaken off.

The Yates boys and Baker are farmers, residents of the McAfee section. The four left a pool room shortly before the accident, which happened at 2 a. m.

THIRD MAN HELD IN THEFT OF CAR

DeKalb Police Chief Dailey Arrests Alleged Driver in Tallapoosa.

The man who was allegedly driving the personal car of DeKalb County Police Chief J. T. Dailey when, by an unusual quirk of fate, he spotted the car early Saturday night and captured two of the occupants after a six-mile chase, was arrested early yesterday morning in Tallapoosa.

The car had been stolen early Friday night from in front of Chief Dailey's residence at 1374 McPherson avenue, S. E.

When he saw the car, he immediately gave chase, capturing G. M. Bowles, 35, of an Atlanta avenue address, and J. C. Butler, 20, of a Georgia avenue address, when they leaped from the car after driving up a blind alley.

The man at the wheel, whom the chief said he recognized, fled on foot. Later, Chief Dailey heard he had taken a train to Tallapoosa. So the chief drove to that city, and arrested the suspect there.

The man gave his name as Milton Ellis, 20, of 312 Hardee street. He was charged with larceny of an automobile. According to Chief Dailey, he was convicted of a similar charge last year, but a 12-month sentence was suspended after he had served six months.

BALDWIN'S CONDITION IS SAID TO BE SERIOUS

The condition of Joe Baldwin, 31, secretary of the Chapman-Baldwin Realty Company, who was injured at about 10:30 o'clock Saturday night when the automobile he was driving struck a parked car on Piedmont avenue at Pine street, was reported as serious yesterday by doctors at St. Joseph's Infirmary.

Baldwin suffered a slight fracture of the skull and slight concussion of the brain. He was first taken to Grady hospital, and then transferred to the other institution. After his car struck the parked vehicle, it skidded into a tree 200 feet away and landed on the lawn of a residence.

Cystex is an excellent prescription to help overcome this condition. It starts its beneficial action almost immediately, yet contains no harmful or injurious ingredients. I consider Cystex a prescription which men and women in all walks of life should find beneficial in the treatment of functional Kidney disorders." And Dr. T. J. Urban League.

By M. L. LATIMER,
Acting Executive Secretary.

The janitors' training school is one of the major activities of the Urban league during the current weeks. The course consists of eight weeks of instruction, and is free to all who are interested. It is especially open to all janitors, maids, porters and elevator operators, employed and unemployed, and others who wish to become more efficient through the courses offered.

This is the fourth year in which the Urban league has offered this course. The present registration is 107. Instruction comprises care and firing of furnaces, methods of sanitation, coal and combustion, care of electrical equipment, care of plumbing and other subjects.

The school is one of the most unique, effective and highly commended projects of the Atlanta Urban league. It has enlisted the interest and co-operation of wholesale and retail dealers and realtors. The lecture on "Methods of Sanitation" is given by John E. Nelson, who is associated with a firm of manufacturing chemists. Other lectures are delivered by men who have gained their knowledge by practical work in large apartment houses and office buildings.

Certificates are awarded at the end of the course for regular attendance and diligent attention, and these have been the means of placement to a considerable number of those graduating.

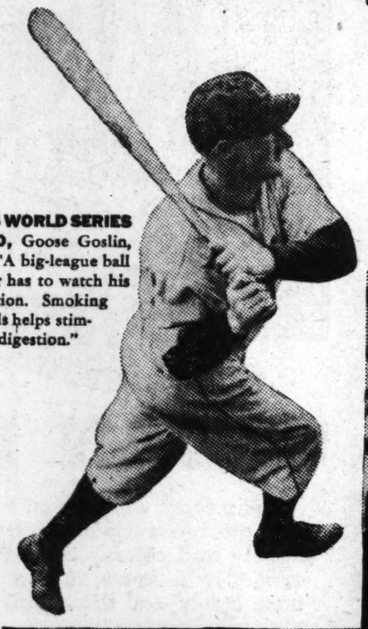

The league is concluding two weeks of intensive work on its national health program and is working in close co-operation with the "clean-up and paint-up" program, which was a part of the city-wide campaign sponsored by the women's division of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. This organization gave particular attention to the work of the Urban league, exerting itself to enlist the support and interest of the negro population.

A notable feature of the campaign was the active participation of the school children, who carried the message of good citizenship through cleanliness throughout their communities, not only by educational parades, but by labor with brooms, mops and paint brushes. In the negro sections of the city, extensive instruction in methods of personal hygiene and in community sanitation was given in all schools by short talks in movies and churches by local physicians and by the distribution of posters and pamphlets.

You need good digestion to face the nervous strain of modern living!

1935 WORLD SERIES HERO, Goose Goslin, says: "A big-league ball player has to watch his digestion. Smoking Camels helps stimulate digestion."

"I HAVE TO EAT IN 30 MINUTES—and then go to work catching red-hot rivets, standing on narrow beams hundreds of feet in the air," says Harry Fisher, steel worker. "Smoking Camels helps my digestion, gives me a swell 'lift.'"

Smoking Camels Assists Digestion to Proceed Normally and Stimulates a Sense of Ease and Good Feeling

When people are tired, worried, or nervous, digestion is apt to be affected. The flow of digestive fluids slows up.

Smoking Camels has a favorable influence in increasing the flow of these digestive fluids. The increase brought about by smoking Camels has actually been measured by scientists. Thus, there are sound, definite reasons why Camels add to the enjoyment of your meals.

Camels are supremely mild—never get on the nerves or tire your taste. Enjoy Camels as much as you like...for their good cheer and "lift"...for their rare flavor! Smoke Camel's costlier tobaccos for digestion's sake. They set you right!

SHE FEEDS THOUSANDS DAILY. Miss Lenora Flinn, dietitian, says: "With me, it's always Camels! Smoking Camels during meals and after stimulates digestion, causing increased flow of digestive fluids. Camels never jangle my nerves."

COSTLIER TOBACCOS

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand.

THE TERRACED MARINE DINING ROOM of the Edgewater Beach Hotel, Chicago. Those who dine on tempting food...at leisure...with music...and gay companionship...also appreciate Camels for their aid to digestion. Camels make food taste better—help you to enjoy it more. "Good times and good tobacco go together," says Fred, maitre d'hôtel of the Marine Dining Room. "Here, where fine foods are prepared and served for those who like the best—so many of our guests smoke Camels. They are immensely popular."

'RICH LAND'—POVERTY EDDY DESCRIBES DIXIE

Explains Experimental Farm To Solve Five Major Problems.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 19.—(AP)—War, fascism and economic distress as interpreted by the Arkansas share-cropper situation were given as major threats to civilization by Dr. Sherwood Eddy today.

Dr. Eddy left for Hillhouse, Miss., a farm of 2,138 acres, which was bought at "$5 an acre" and is now occupied by 24 families through Eddy's assistance.

"Ultimately we hope to take 100 more families," said Dr. Eddy. "It is being operated on a system based on justice, mercy and sound economic principles.

"Negroes were brought to the farm at the request of the white tenants and share-croppers selected to live there. There is no social equality between the two, only a hope for an understanding between them.

"We are trying to work out five problems: To stand for civil liberties for all; try to prevent share croppers and tenants from sinking to ruin; attempt to promote co-operative labor; solve the problem of technological unemployment; solve the race problem. It is here in the south where the races meet. We don't know much about it in New York. The problem is delicate and difficult, but some day it will be solved."

Describing the Arkansas situation, Dr. Eddy declared:

"We saw the face of slavery, feudalism and fascism on the part of planters and landowners toward poor evicted share-croppers and tenant farmers, both black and white.

"We found peonage, serfdom, poverty, disease and sometimes terror and violence. The ordinary share cropper is receiving an average of $12 yearly per family apart from rent, including an advance for food charged at the highest prices and a high rate of interest.

"It makes a devastating impression to drive through the richest soil in the United States and see the poorest human beings living in tumbledown shanties, rewarded for their toil by poverty, pellagra, hookworm, malaria and illiteracy."

principles. We want to be able to draw our candidates from all of our citizenry without regard as to whether or not they are possessed of great wealth."

Allen declared yesterday that the contributions for the president's entry fee so far receivd and the contributions pledged to date indicate that the $10,000 will be raised within the next few days.

"It may be taken as an indication," said Allen, "that the citizenry of Georgia—themselves people who couldn't afford to spend $10,000 to enter a political race—are objecting strenuously to the tactics of the Talmadge-controlled democratic committee. They realize that the president could not enter the race in Georgia without their help and they are determined that he shall enter regardless of the obstacles that are placed in his path by Talmadge or his committee."

TEXTILE OPERATORS BACK CODE MEASURE

duction increased 30 per cent, but sales only nine, prices were reduced from 5 to 7 per cent, hours of operation increased 13 per cent and employment was reduced 13. Wages were reduced 5 per cent.

"In some rayon and silk weaving districts today weavers are paid as little as $8 a week whereas in other districts employers are maintaining wages of $20 to $25 a week for weaving similar patterns," Van Horn said.

The bill would set up a textile commission with authority to fix minimum wages on the basis of a 35-hour week. It also would provide for production control by authorizing the commission to enforce curtailment when overproduction makes restriction desirable. In such cases the commission would be directed first to order curtailment of the third, or midnight shift.

east at Hoffman's request, and that his client, Spitz, had been freed from jail to uncover the "ransom" after "friends of the governor" paid $892 due on a $1,000 fine assessed against Spitz.

He said the money was "in New York state," and predicted it would lead to an "unquestionable" solution of the crime for which Hauptmann died.

"From what I know," the lawyer said, "Hauptmann told as straight a story as it is humanly possible for a man to tell." He added:

"I can't say why without saying too much."

The lawyer said Governor Hoffman's investigation of the Lindbergh case was continuing in "a very, very active way."

Finnigan offered no proof of his story, saying merely that "future developments" would "vindicate" Governor Hoffman's inquiry.

NEW YORKER ADMITS KIDNAPING OF WENDEL

BROOKLYN, N. Y., April 19.—(UP)—District Attorney William Geoghan announced at Parkville police station late tonight that Martin Schlossman had admitted participating in the kidnaping of Paul H. Wendel, disbarred attorney who faced charges for a time of murdering Charles A. Lindbergh Jr.

Schlossman, his wife, Fay, and her brother, Sidney Bleefeld, have been questioned about the case since Saturday when they were picked up after Wendel identified the home of Harry Bleefeld, Schlossman's father-in-law, as the house in which he was held captive 10 days and tortured until he signed a confession to the Lindbergh crime.

FOUR ACES REMAIN BRIDGE CHAMPIONS

Trounce Von Zedtwitz Team by 1,880 Points in Final.

NEW YORK, April 19.—(AP)—The Four Aces successfully defended their national masters' team-of-four contract bridge championship today by trouncing Waldemar von Zedtwitz's crack team by 1,880 points in their final round match of 96 hands.

Von Zedtwitz, Sam Fry Jr., Edward Hymes Jr., and M. D. Maier cut the Aces' lead from 4,030 points during the last 32 boards. A missed grand slam and an excuseable error by Fry and Von Zedtwitz proved the margin of victory.

Although they played with B. Jay Becker, of Philadelphia, substituting for Captain Michael T. Gottlieb, the Aces' victory maintained their team record of successes in major tournaments during the past three years. Oswald Jacoby, David Burnstine and Howard Scheneken were the other members of the quartet.

By winning the masters' event and the Nate B. Spingold trophy, the aces won the right to represent the United States in the unofficial international team matches for the Olcott-Pate cup.

The hit-run car struck Hanie in the left leg, almost amputating it. He was taken to Grady hospital. He also suffered severe shock.

TWO ATLANTA YOUTHS ARRESTED IN ROBBERY

DeKalb county police last night arrested two Atlanta youths after the alleged victim of a robbery April 11 identified one of them.

L. M. Martin, of 804 Capitol avenue, who reported to police that he was robbed of $24.70 in cash and a $60 check by two youths whom he met in a roadhouse on the Stone Mountain highway and to whom he gave a lift in his car, identified Dallas Davis, 19, of a Melrose avenue address.

Martin's alleged identification took place in the city stockade, where Davis was serving a 10-day sentence for a minor offense. The other youth, Harold Pickens, 20, of 1830 DeKalb avenue, was arrested at his home. He confessed to being with Davis that night, according to police.

Martin said he offered to drive the men home and when they reached a lonely spot on Harold street, one of them drew a pistol. After being robbed, Martin told police, his car was wrecked in a ditch.

Passengers in the car, who were taken to the hospital, were J. W. Pollard, 17, lacerated face and head; Ogden Landrum, 27, broken left leg; R. D. Pepper, 31, lacerated head; John Maddox, 20, sprained right ankle, all of Tyron, and Dennis Stinchcomb, 29, of Fairburn, lacerated right leg and hip.

Merritts was taken to Grady hospital in serious condition. He was being attacked when Daniel James, 23, negro of a Bynum street address, also a cab driver, passed his cab.

James halted, ran into the alley and fired several shots. Merritt's assailants fled on foot. Cause of the stabbing was not learned by police.

Musical Features of Festival Day Attract Many Lovers of Music

Next to the dogwood itself and the "show" gardens of the city music was the important feature of the opening of the first Atlanta Dogwood Festival yesterday. With a series of concerts in different parts of the city the festival get under way in brilliant style, and everywhere there was festivity in the air.

One of the major concerts was that given by the Buckhead Symphony orchestra, with Enrico Leide conducting, at the Buckhead Shell. This concert assembled a large audience of music lovers to hear a program built largely of compositions suggesting springtime and flowers. A feature of the program was the debut of a young Atlanta soprano, Margaret McCarty, who sang "Elsa's Dream," from Wagner's "Lohengrin" with the orchestra. Her voice is fresh and young and true, possessing a lovely tone quality which gives promise of a fine vocal career for this young singer. She was so warmly received that an encore was given.

Another feature of the program was the first public performance of a composition by Leide, "Silhouette Orientale," one of the numbers of an orchestral suite he composed a few months ago. Other highlights of the program were the overture to Rossini's "Semiramide," Delibes' "Naila Ballet," and "Waltz of the Flowers," Tschaikowsky's "Nutcracker Suite."

Yaarab temple's band gave a concert in the pavillion at Grant park, playing a spirited program of favorite classical and semi-classical numbers to a crowd gathered to enjoy the music in the sunshine. One of the features of this program was the "Dogwood Festival March," written especially for the occasion by A. J. Garing. At the same hour as these two concerts—3 o'clock—Russell High school band presented a program in Piedmont park.

Later in the afternoon Joseph Ragan, organist of All Sanits' Episcopal church, gave an organ recital at the church, sponsored by the Georgia chapter of the American Guild of Organists, complimenting the Dogwood Festival. He was assisted by Ed Bray, baritone, who song "Lord God of Abraham," from Mendelssohn's "Elijah," with richly colored vocal tone and fine musicianship. Mr. Ragan's playing was inspirational, his technique clean and agile, his interpretations authoritative, and his program tastefully chosen. Especially impressive were "Harmonies du Soir," Karg-Elert, and the Allegro movement of Vierne's "Second Symphony."

Last night Charles A. Sheldon Jr., was featured in an organ recital at the temple, this concert also sponsored by the Organ Guild and given in compliment to the festival visitors. His offerings, given a sincere delivery of fine musical utterances, were received by an appreciative audience. Highlights were Bach's "Fantasia and Fugue in G minor," and his brilliant performance of the finale to Vierne's "First Symphonie."

The Big Bethel choir, composed of 50 negro singers, gave a program of spirituals at Five Points at 6:30, with a large group of visitors congregating to hear this organization which is famed for its singing of spirituals.

21,863 SEE TETER IN STUNT SERIES

'Hell Driver' Will Appear at Lakewood Again Next Sunday.

A crowd of 21,863 spectators witnessed the official opening of the Dogwood Festival attractions at Lakewood park where "Lucky" Teter and His Hell Drivers were the feature attraction yesterday afternoon.

"Lucky" Teter again stole the show when he made one of the most beautiful and spectacular jumps of his entire career. Racing down the track in his stock automobile at a speed of nearly 90 miles an hour, running up a 48-inch rampway, he jumped a two-ton truck which had been placed 25 feet from his takeoff.

Lakewood officials announce that "Lucky" Teter and his Hell Drivers will make another appearance at 3 o'clock next Sunday afternoon.

Dog Awakens Master, Who Routs 2 Burglars

A dog which aroused its sleeping master resulted in the routing of two negro burglars from the Merchants Wholesale Used Furniture Company at 525 Peters street at about 11 o'clock last night.

The dog, a German police dog, was unchained from the rear of the building by the burglars, who thought this action would prevent the animal from barking. The freed dog went to the room occupied by Curtis Smith, 47, watchman, and awakened him.

Smith saw one of the negroes in a doorway, and fired a load of buckshot from a 12-gauge pump shotgun at him. He and his companion then fled in a truck, parked in the rear of the establishment.

POLICE BOARD CHANGE SUGGESTED BY GILLIAM

liam said, "there would be no question of politics entering into the selection of police officers. Each ward would have the same weight on the committee. Although I do not believe it to be true, it has been rumored around on occasion that candidates for appointment to the department from the five wards now represented on the committee have been favored.

"If there is any feeling in certain circls on that score, the 13-member committee should certainly eliminate the idea."

"Would Provide Out."

Gilliam pointed out that the proposed arrangement would serve to destroy the present equation, which he declared is "all snarled up," would bring new blood to the committee and reduce the present factionalistic setup, and would provide an "out" for all concerned, the mayor included.

The alderman said that he had not discussed the proposed regulation with any other member of council, but that he believed the measure would receive ample support to carry.

"I believe that each ward has the right to be represented on a committee which is as important as this one," he said, "and I feel that council members whose wards are not already represented will favor the plan."

The police committee has recently been the scene of bitter debate over the proposal of Chairman Bridges to force the resignation of Allen Couch, who was recently convicted in recorder's court on charges of drunk and disorderly.

Bridges assailed Couch, declaring that it was difficult to enforce a regulation prohibiting drinking by police officers when members of the committee were known to do the same thing.

Couch refused to resign from the committee and challenged Bridges to force the issue. Mayor Key has taken no action in the matter.

Council today is also expected to consider revocation of the beer license of Harvey's restaurant, raided by city detectives last week. Sam Dardarian, proprietor, has denied that the liquor seized was his property or the property of the restaurant, it was learned. He will cite to council the fact that only two pints and two quarts were found in various places indicated that it belonged to patrons or employes, it was said.

KNOX BALLOT CLAIMS DISPUTED BY BORAH

Attempt To 'Thwart' Will of Illinois Voters Would Defeat G. O. P., He Says.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—(UP) Senator William E. Borah's campaign manager tonight disputed Frank Knox's claim of 130 delegates to the republican national convention and warned that any attempt to "thwart the will" of rural Illinois voters would defeat the republican ticket there in November.

Knox, in an interview here yesterday, claimed the support of 130 delegates, more than the number claimed by Governor Alfred M. Landon, of Kansas. He gave no breakdown by states, explaining that many supporting him were officially uninstructed, but said he was assured of 56 of Illinois' 57 convention votes. He estimated the expenses of his Illinois campaign at $25,000 and Borah's at $7,500.

Carl G. Bachmann, chairman of the Borah-for-President campaign committee, took issue with the delegate claim as well as with the Chicago publisher's estimate of Borah's expenses.

"Senator Borah carried 13 out of 15 congressional districts outside of Chicago," Bachmann said. "The voters in these rural districts went to the polls and voted for Senator Borah in the presidential preference primary, in spite of the organized opposition of the party machine backed by wealth.

"This expression of confidence of the rural voters in Senator Borah, without the expenditure of a dollar, amounts to a political miracle. It proves what Senator Borah's friends have been saying, that he is the only candidate who can carry the farm states of the west and northwest.

"Any attempt to thwart the will of the rural voters of Illinois by ignoring the presidential preference primary in the 15 downstate districts spells defeat for the republican ticket next November in Illinois. The Borah followers are liberal minded and will not stand for such political duplicity."

Bachman said Borah's only expenses in Illinois were his personal traveling expenses, amounting to a few hundred dollars at most.

Borah decided yesterday not to enter the Maryland primary. Governor Harry W. Nice, republican, was prepared to enter if any other candidate did, but Borah's decision means that the fight in that state will be in the democratic primary, in which President Roosevelt is opposed by Colonel Henry Breckinridge, New York attorney for Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh. Mr. Roosevelt spoke in Baltimore last Monday and Breckinridge plans a number of speeches in the state before the primary, two weeks off.

DOGWOOD FETE OPENS WITH BIG ATTENDANCE

seum, of flower paintings by a number of the most prominent artists of the nation, especially secured for the Dogwood Festival, yesterday brought large crowds to the institution.

The museum was filled to near capacity throughout the day and it was estimated that at virtually any time during the exhibit, which will continue today, there were 400 or more spectators in the building.

A crowd estimated at between 5,000 and 6,000 persons at 6:30 o'clock last night attended the recital by the Big Bethel choir of 50 voices at Five Points.

The audience filled the surrounding sidewalks and jammed into the streets, necessitating the rerouting of traffic during the concert which was under the direction of H. F. Furlow and Nellie L. Davis.

Fifteen selections and encores were presented. Enthusiastic applause indicated the appreciation of the big throng.

Arrive This Morning.

Led by the great conductor the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra will roll into the Terminal station aboard their especially equipped 10-car train at 10:15 o'clock this morning. In the aggregation are 110 musicians, each and every one of them concert stars in their own right.

Present to greet them will be the officials of the Dogwood Festival Association, the Atlanta Music Club and the Atlanta Philharmonic Society. Walter Rich, president of the festival, will present the distinguished leader a lei of dogwood.

The concert, which is to be held at the Fox theater, will get under way at 8 o'clock. On many occasions before the big theater has held noted musicians, but never has there been any greater than Stokowski. Under the wizardry of his baton, exquisite musical instruments valued at more than $250,000 will pour forth the majestic strains of the symphony, a rendition which will live forever in the memories of those Atlantans fortunate enough to be present.

Parade This Afternoon.

This afternoon beautifully decorated floats entered by the garden clubs of the city will pass in parade through the city's business section, telling their stories of springtime beauty in Atlanta when the dogwood is all abloom.

The parade will start at 3 o'clock, headed by an escort of motorcycle police. The line of march will begin at Whitehall street, south of Brotherton. In the line will be five outstanding bands of the city, and Mayor Key will have a place of honor.

The mayor and his party will swing off the route of march at North avenue and face their automobile west, reviewing the procession from that point.

On Friday and Saturday grand opera will again be heard in Atlanta when a galaxy of Metropolitan Opera stars will make their debut at the Fox theater. At 8:30 o'clock Friday night Aida will be presented with Martinelli, Morelli, Giannini, Dreda, Aves and other magnificent voices.

ETHIOPIANS RETREAT AFTER 5-DAY BATTLE

southern front and puts his forces in position for a frontal assault or an encircling movement against Harar and Jijiga.

Dispatches from the southern front show that in the fighting at Giano Gobo, Graziani crushed Nasibu's right wing, the major Ethiopian defense before Harar and Jijiga.

The Libyans first attacked the Ethiopians in the gorges of the Gorrah Wadi, 30 miles southwest of Sassah Baneh.

Fiercest Battle.

The fiercest battle of the campaign occurred at the Giani Gobo ford where the Ethiopian divisional commander, Dedjasmach Abebe Demtu, was reported to have fallen with 3,000 of his men.

Abebe Demtu was sent south by Emperor Haile Selassie to reinforce Nasibu. He was ordered to march along the watershed between the Webbe Shebelli river valley on the west and the valley of the Fanfan on the east.

His objective was to encircle the main body of Graziani's troops, which had launched an offensive against Sassah Baneh, Harar and Jijiga.

When Graziani was apprised of the menace he at once threw the Libyan division, commanded by white officers, into action near Dunnan. The Libyans were ordered to attack.

The most desperate phase of the engagement was centered at the Giana Gobo ford where a single Ethiopian machine gun held the Italians at bay for hours.

It was reported unofficially that at least 600 of Graziani's men were killed or wounded since April 14. But the Ethiopian losses were believed to have been 10 times as great. And the Ethiopians were in full retreat with the Italians advancing swiftly over the difficult terrain south of Harar and Jijiga.

Authoritative Mogadiscio dispatches reported a column of Italian and native troops, commanded by General Frusci, occupied the village of Warandab and the surrounding district Saturday.

Warandab is 75 miles southeast of Sahhah Baneh, astride the road between the Italian base at Gorahai and the important Sassah Baneh water wells.

RALLY NEAR DESSEYE TO BLOCK ITALIANS

ADDIS ABABA, April 19.—(AP)—Crown Prince Asfa Wosan rallied Ethiopian troops south of Dessye today in a desperate effort to stem the Italian advance.

Fresh troops from remote provinces in the interior were ordered northward post haste to reinforce Emperor Haile Selassie's retreating forces.

It was disclosed that the removal of the seat of the government to a less exposed site was discussed at a secret meeting of chieftains and officials yesterday but no decision was announced.

At the last minute a Belgian military commission, which resigned in a body, postponed its departure for Djibouti, French Somaliland. The nature of the Belgians' dispute with the government was not disclosed.

Written instructions as to what to do in case of danger were issued by some legations as there was an unconfirmed report that the Italians had occupied the strategic city of Jijiga.

The Ethiopian Young Men's Association began the distribution of arms to men, women and boys who apply for them. Males are expected to proceed to the front and the women to help guard Addis Ababa.

Huge popular demonstrations were held in various parts of the capital and the battle cry was sounded: "It is better to die free than to live as Italian slaves."

Orders were published prescribing flogging and heavy fines for slackers. All able-bodied men, the government asserted, must help defend the nation, even servants of Europeans, who were formerly exempt from military service.

In the Dolomites in Italy it is still the custom for a youth to set a ladder to a girl's window, mount it, tap, and talk with her—an ancient custom which Shakespeare utilized in "Romeo and Juliet."

WIFE, CHILD KILLED IN TENNESSEE FIRE

RICHARD CITY, Tenn., April 19. (AP)—Mrs. "Buster" McCade Jr., and her 3-year-old daughter were burned to death early this morning in their home here.

According to officers, McCade said he was reading about 2 a. m. when he noticed the house burning and he jumped out of a window, thinking his wife and child had escaped. Later he found they had perished, the officers said.

Little Entente Frowns on Austria As Mobile Army Parades in Vienna

VIENNA, April 19.—(AP)—The Little Entente made a pointed gesture of disapproval today as Austria's small but efficient army held a spring parade on the Ring Strasse.

Half a million persons watched several hundred trucks, light and heavy artillery pieces, tanks and armored cars pass in a snappy procession which lasted for three hours.

The Little Entente, offended by Austria's determination to introduce compulsory military service, showed its disapproval by instructing its military attaches to refrain from occupying places reserved for them among the reviewing officials.

On the other hand, military delegations from Italy, Germany and Hungary were present. Former King Alfonso, of Spain, and Sir Austen Chamberlain, former foreign minister of Great Britain, were among the spectators.

It was stated in well informed quarters that the Little Entente (Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania) indicated yesterday it would be displeased by the extraordinary display of military force which might be interpreted as a show of defiance in the face of the Entente's protest against Austria's new compulsory military service law.

In any event, Austria showed less of its army than in the parade a year ago. Only 15 airplanes, including a bomber, soared over Heroe's square. Emphasis on motorized equipment indicated Austria's policy of developing a highly mobile army.

There has been an unusual burst of political activity in this section of Europe in the past few weeks. The Hapsburg monarchist leader, Baron Friedrich von Wiesner, solemnly declared "the time for a restoration of the imperial order is ripe." Nazis, who wish to see Germany forge to the east, answered with the slaying of two opponents and other acts of terrorism in southern Austria. Croats, seeking autonomy, touched off disorders in Yugoslavia in which at least 15 were killed.

Rumania outlawed the rightist "iron guard," which tried a comeback with an assassination and conspiracy. Dozens of its members were arrested.

Hungarian revisionists, encouraged by the German example, renewed their clamor for changing the treaty of Trianon and acquiring lands lost to the Little Entente.

Bulgaria, alarmed because Turkey remilitarized the Dardanelles, renewed a demand for a corridor giving her a direct route to the Aegean sea.

On all sides there were evidences of rearmament. Rumania raised its ordinary military budget to $38,000,000 and created a special fund of $20,000,000 for the development of aviation.

The Vienna newspaper Neuste Nachrichten estimated Czechoslovakia's air strength at more than 900 planes, Rumania's at more than 800 and Yugoslavia's at more than 850.

Incendiarist Hunted as Five Fires Rout Scores From Homes in Bronx

NEW YORK, April 19.—(AP)—Five fires within a few blocks of each other routed a score of families from their homes, brought out virtually every piece of apparatus in the Bronx and sent police on a search for an incendiarist early today.

Three persons were injured, one seriously, in the quick succession of blazes. Two firemen were overcome by smoke.

Hundreds of persons tumbled out of bed to watch the excitement as fire trucks, ambulances, emergency trucks and police cars screamed through the early morning hour.

With almost all of the Bronx apparatus as well as trucks from Harlem and Manhattan at the scene, a general redistribution of fire fighting equipment as far downtown as 23rd street, Manhattan, was ordered to guard districts left unprotected.

Fire Marshal Thomas P. Brophy sent his entire staff of deputies into the Bronx to search for the suspected incendiarist.

Three men were rounded up in the neighborhood and taken to a police station for questioning.

The first blaze occurred in a four-story duplex apartment house in Gouverneur place. Ten minutes later fire was discovered under a stairway in a four-story tenement a half block away, and for the next half hour alarms sounded at regular intervals. Night-gowned tenants scampered over rooftops and down fire escapes to safety.

Marie Cosgrove, 24, one of four persons rescued by firemen from the second blaze, suffered severe burns and lacerations. Hubert Baldwin, of Manasquan, N. J., also was helped down a ladder from this building and treated for slight lacerations.

In two instances, the flames spread to adjoining buildings until a total of seven structures, mostly tenements, were involved.

A false alarm in the same neighborhood added to the firemen's difficulties.

There was no estimate of damage, but it was not believed to be considerable.

Fulton superior court, in a divided opinion, held that the courts have jurisdiction and directed the banks, as well as Hamilton, to file interpleaders.

Governor Talmadge, through the law department assistants and special assistant attorneys general, maintained that only the general assembly can review the acts of the Governor and appealed the decision of the superior court.

Four of the six members of the supreme court have disqualified themselves and the Governor has appointed judges of the superior court to sit with the two qualified justices in passing on the case which involves his own action.

REA HEAD PROMISES NOT TO FAVOR CO-OPS

WASHINGTON, April 19.—(AP)—Morris L. Cook, rural electrification administrator, promised the National Electrical Manufacturers' Association today he would not favor sale of appliances by co-operative groups over private dealers.

Electric service co-operatives are expected to borrow most of the $400,000,000 the REA would be authorized to lend under the Norris bill, which has been passed by the senate and house and is now in conference. Cooke said, however, that "we have not approved or advocated any centralization of this business."

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 19.—(UP)—Justiniano Allende Posse, president of the National Bureau of Highways in Argentina, said today that the United States "not only has the best highways in the world, but has developed a new science in constructing them."

'Great Impersonation' Opens Run at Capitol

With a brilliant stage show and fine feature picture, an entertaining program was presented yesterday at the Capitol theater for a week's run.

The screen offering, "The Great Impersonation," stars that veteran of many films, Edmund Lowe, with Valerie Hobson co-starred in the leading feminine role.

Based on a novel by E. Phillips Oppenheim, master writer of mystery stories, Lowe enacts a dual role in a thoroughly engaging and clever manner.

The story moves swiftly and interestingly, shifting from scenes in an African jungle to an English castle. An unusual twist is given the love elements of the story as Lowe seeks to win the heart of a girl enmeshed in the hypnotic control of a sinister woman.

"Broadway Merry-Go-Round" is the title of the new stage offering which features such fine performers as Billie and Beth, famous singing stars, and Three Little Words, clever trio of harmony makers.

Others in the unit, which has its share of pretty girls, are Cliff Crane, comedian; Jack and Judy Kane, dancers; Kohn and DePinto, musical novelties; Joan Brooks Sorority Sisters, and many other high-class vaudeville acts.

Newsreel and short subject round out the satisfying bill. —L. F.

JULIAN BOEHM.

Bernice Denton Pierson.

Julian Boehm, civic leader in Atlanta for 30 years, president of the Community Chest and recently awarded a certificate for distinguished achievement for the past year, has a long list of distinguished service to his credit. To mention some of them: he headed the roll call for the American Red Cross for this district in 1934 and 1935. Was vice president and director of the Atlanta Tuberculosis Association for a number of years; past president of the Federation of Jewish Charities and now on the board; past president of the Atlanta Ad Club, Masonic Club, Civitan Club, Humane Society, Good Samaritan Clinic, member of board Georgia Children's Society. He was born August 10, under the Zodiacal sign Leo, a sign which gives him idealism, exuberance, love, friendliness, intuition. In Mr. Boehm's horoscope we notice in particular the rising Moon in Cancer, exactly conjoined to the Ascendent and fairly well aspected. This gives a persuasive, sensible, sociable, capable, attractive personality. The Sun trine the Moon is particularly fortunate. It strengthens the entire chart and is responsible for his success, health, good home surroundings, with faithful friends, esteem in the community. Mr. Boehm's rise in life is because of his innate ability. His Sun in the fifth house gives dramatic ability, a strong love of amusement and ability to create amusement on one's own account. This is evidenced by the fact that he is one of the best known amateur magicians in the country. Four planets in fixed signs, well aspected, gives him ability to accomplish whatever he sets out to do, gives prosperity and promises a long life in which he will always hold his well-earned place in the Sun.

'YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!'

By IDA JEAN KAIN.

TAKE TIME FOR EXERCISE.

Physical educators have decided that exercise before breakfast isn't necessary—but you probably beat them to that conclusion years ago!

IDA JEAN KAIN.

It is true that early morning exercise does not "set up" the underweights, or even the normal weights who are inclined to be tense. Obviously, the highly strung individual should not try to get up steam early and hold that pitch throughout the entire day. It is too expensive nervously.

For you overweights, however, the sooner you get going in the morning the better. More fat is consumed in energy in the early morning hours than at any other time. Before breakfast the sugars and starches taken in the previous day's meals have been largely burned, and exercise draws on the stored body fat.

Fit your exercise into your schedule at the time when you will get the most out of it. The hour will depend on your daily program. Before breakfast is ideal for overweights who have the time, but to dash through a series of perfunctory motions with an eye on the clock may be a waste of precious moments. To be effective, exercise must have purpose behind every movement and be free from strain and tension.

The housewife can take advantage of the first high vitality peak of the day, which, physiologists have found, occurs at 11 o'clock in the morning. At this time you would be likely to put more enthusiasm and effort into your exercise, with better results. A second high vitality level comes at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, which may be a more convenient time for your exercise. Housework in itself is usually insufficient exercise, for it uses certain muscles continuously, others not at all.

Office workers who do not have the time for morning exercise and are too tired for exercise at night will find it profitable to their health and their figures to attend two or three gym classes a week. You may be tired from physical inactivity as from the day's grind, and you need exercise to bring the blood into the muscles and relieve nervous tension. Try to make some exercise a daily practice.

If there is any question as to whether or not you should exercise, ask your doctor, for he is the only one who can answer this question for you.

The time for exercise is optional, but regularity is essential. Fifteen to 20 minutes' corrective exercises daily, a 30-minute brisk walk each day, and once or twice a week a half-day of activity in the open, make a perfect figure program. You may not be able to manage this amount of exercise, but you can get a walk and a few minutes of corrective exercise each day. Don't look upon exercise as an ordeal but as an opportunity to cast aside all mental worries in the enjoyment of physical activity.

Culbertson on Contract

By ELY CULBERTSON, World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

Opening Bids of Three No Trump.

An opening three no trump bid is the next step above the two no trump bid, and shows at least seven honor tricks, with a maximum of eight-plus honor tricks. The distribution always is 4-3-3-3, and every suit always is securely stopped, as in a two no trump bid.

For example, bid three no trump with

♠AQ6 ♥KQJ ♦AK54 ♣AK10

or

♠AKQ ♥AK6 ♦AKJ ♣A1054

With eight and one-half honor tricks and balanced distribution, four no trump is the correct bid. Partner should raise to six with two queens, or bid six in any five-card suit headed by the queen or better.

Extremely Lucky Hand.

The goddess of chance too often seems to smile on not merely the bold, but the rash as well. In today's hand a ridiculously optimistic contract was fulfilled only by amazing "breaks."

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 heart	Pass	1 spade	Pass
1 no trp	Pass	2 spades	Pass
2 no trp	Pass	4 spades	[final bid]

Undoubtedly, North should have passed to the two-spade bid but he evidently was a believer in miracles.

West opened the low diamond, dummy ducked, and East's king won, after which the ten of diamonds was returned. Dummy's ace won and three rounds of trumps followed. West, on lead with the queen, properly decided that his one chance was to underlead his club ace, find his partner with the queen, and declarer with the jack, and have declarer guess wrong. Since declarer was so fortunate as to be ten high in the suit, he was forced to put up the club king. When it held, he returned to his hand with a diamond and finessed his singleton heart up to the ace-queen. The queen winning, the ace was cashed for a club discard, and a club trick finally, and graciously, conceded for the poor defenders' third trick.

TODAY'S QUESTION.

Question: With a combined holding of ten trumps, do the percentages favor a finesse for the missing king, or a straight lead of the ace for a drop?

Answer: The finesse offers much the better chance, on a pure percentage basis.

Friendly Counsel

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your name held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield care The Atlanta Constitution.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:

I have ha dnothing but happiness all my life. We have been married 28 years and are still in our forties. My husband is the most perfect man that ever lived and four grown children haven't a bad habit among them. We have always gone out together until last summer when my husband's work took him away from home. I don't know what happened but I discovered that he had been in the company of a young girl a third his age—a mere child. He has been taking her and her friends out for some time. He doesn't deny this but insists he has done nothing wrong. I am sure it was clean fun but I think he has done me a terrible trick. I think he owes me an apology; however, he doesn't see it that way. I have lost respect for him and cannot love him as I ouce did. If he would only say he was sorry I could forget so much easier. This way I cannot. I feel wrecked nervously and spiritually. Am I expecting too much of him? Should I leave him? My physician tells me that if I keep on this way I am going to be ill from worry. I know my husband cares for me and worships the children. Then why did he shatter my faith?

HEART-BROKEN WIFE.

ANSWER:

Lady, your husband may have forfeited your respect temporarily and cooled your ardor momentarily but he hasn't shattered your faith in him as you, in your anger, would believe. Now be a good sport. Twenty-eight years of unquestioned fidelity should be counted to your husband for righteousness. A fine example set to his children throughout their youth should give him another good mark. You must admit that nearly 30 years of sunshine without a cloud in your sky is much better than the average wife has. You must admit that, while it is asinine for the father of grown children to go larking with girls, it is not a criminal offense. You are lucky and so is he, in that you discovered his truancy in time to call a halt. Then quit thinking of it and quit talking about it as if it were a crime.

It is foolish for a middle-aged wife to bring on a nervous breakdown and make herself physically ill because her middle-aged husband won't say three little words of apology. If she were to break up her marriage because her husband has taken flappers to the flickers and joy-ridden them around for a few hours, she would be guilty of worse folly than he.

This isn't a brief for a debonair daddy who goes larking with lassies a third his age. There is nothing to be said of him except what is always said of the middle-aged daddy who steps out to prove to himself that the old rocking chair hasn't got him. He has had a brain storm that has swept him from his moorings and it will take him time to recover. Some say the best man is a potential free-booter and all he needs to bring out these proclivities is a little boredom, or loneliness, a little irritation with mama, or too much of mama, or even the intimation from within that life is fleeting fast and then if ever he must take his fling. Of course there are many men who have the brakes of character all ready to clamp down when temptation comes. Others haven't. The wife who draws a husband that is not equipped with brakes has to drive carefully and be prepared for minor accidents.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

(Posed by Diana Gibson.)

Two Creams—A Magic Cleanser And a Fine Tissue Cream

The demand for good creams, both cleansing and texture, is constant. Another thing even more constant is the demand for a cream that does not cost too much. I know of one that is so splendid for cleansing. It has met with remarkable success.

This cleansing cream comes in either liquefying or heavy. It is excellent for summer, winter, spring and fall, and it seems to dissolve dirt about as well as anything that I have yet heard of. It is handled by drug stores and department stores. It is not expensive, but its cleansing power is magic. I have been trying it out for a year, not only on myself but on many other people, and I have yet to find a complaint about it.

Of course this cosmetic business is a curious one in that what is a find for one woman is considered absolutely no good for another. But when you can get at least a dozen women to agree you've got something!

The same manufacturer makes a skin and tissue cream, it, too, being moderately priced, and I think excellent to use after a thorough cleansing. If you are cream hunting do not overlook these two.

If you want to know where you can purchase any article mentioned in this column phone Mignon at The Constitution. Please do not write unless you live outside the city, in which case inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Festival

The birth of the Dogwood Festival really dates back to 1908 when a far-seeing, broad-visioned group of men recognized the natural beauty of 1800 acres of land in the Northeast section of DeKalb County and developed Druid Hills. At that time it was decreed that every Dogwood tree be cherished and preserved.

For twenty years Metropolitan Opera week in April gave the entire South an opportunity to spend the week in Atlanta and enjoy Dogwood blossom time. In recent years Atlanta alone has enjoyed this increasing vista of loveliness.

But, today, we're officially inviting the world to come spend the week in Atlanta! Attend Dogwood Festival with its concerts, operas, pageants and carnival. From the depths of our hearts we're saying WELCOME!

TOMORROW'S CHILD

By JULIE ANNE MOORE

What has gone before:

Valentine Clarke, who is to marry Robert Greeley, a young New England lawyer in a month, goes from New Manchester to New York with her Aunt Mahala's housekeeper, Mrs. Warren, on a shopping trip. Val's father, Barrie Clarke, had been killed in a Russian airplane crash two year's earlier. Kate Hollister, daughter of Barrie's sister, is editor of a fashion magazine. Val phones Kate, who invites her to a party where she meets Hugh Malcolm, successful young playwright; Bret Gallishaw, a New Manchester boy who while doing newspaper work in New York, wrote a best seller; Leslie Crawford, Bret's halfbrother, and Winifred Sperry, who are starring in Hugh's latest success, "End of Tears," and Guy Williams, who inherited millions and has a small part in the play. Now go on with the story.

INSTALLMENT II.

Kate said, when they were entering her apartment, "They're theater people and writers, mostly—and quite harmless, Val. Keep in circulation if you can and if a green-eyed devil by the name of Guy proposes a walk in the park, call for me."

They were all over the place. Val was introduced to them all, with mumbled biographical notes from Kate.

Val recognized at once Winifred Sperry and Leslie Crawford. She had seen their pictures often. Another man was standing with them before the open hearth. There was something familiar about him.

"You know your fellow townsman, of course," Kate said; and seeing that neither knew the other: "Bret Gallishaw, you ninny."

Bret Gallishaw—Kate's first and, doubtless, only love. Her father had told her about it. Smilingly, as if it had been of not great moment in Kate's busy life. But Val had sensed the truth. . . . Kate's first year in New York, free-lancing because she liked to write and not because she needed the money. Bret Gallishaw, chained to the rim of a newspaper copy desk, working at odd moments on a novel that was presently to give him freedom and a measure of fame. Desperately in love those two—with life, with New York, with each other. And then the novel was published, became a best seller, was made into a movie. Bret had been waiting for that. When he finished his novel, if it had a decent sale, if he made a little money . . . no one knew what happened. Only Kate and Bret—and they never told. Bret's marriage to the fabulously wealthy Evelyn Garfield occurred the week after he received his check for the movie rights to his book.

Bret Gallishaw's brick mansion atop the highest hill in New Manchester was one of the show places of the town; but Val had never seen either Bret or his wife. They were seldom there.

And now here was Bret at Kate's little party and Kate was dragging Val on to the next group, explaining in a carefully modulated voice, "Bret and Leslie Crawford had the same mother. That makes them half-brothers, doesn't it?"

It was in the kitchen that they found Guy Williams. He was chasing an ice cube around a yellow bowl with an ice pick. Val saw that he was about her own age, small and slim, with sandy hair that hung in his face, and small active eyes that were indisputably green and hungry for excitement. To that eager quality in his eyes, something in her own young heart responded instantly. This boy would be fun.

Looking at her, obviously approving of what he saw, Guy said, "I'm doing all the work for this bunch of lugs, but if you'll drop back a little later I'll try to give you a moment of my valuable time. Provided Grandmother Kate here doesn't lock you up somewhere to keep you pure and undefiled."

"If I thought she had so little sense as to give you a second thought," Kate said, agreeably enough, "I'd pack her off home this moment. He's a menace—" slipping her arm through Val's again—"as any young man must be with a 23-million-dollar estate in prospect and nothing in his head."

"My pal," Guy said, making a face. "Don't forget to come back during visiting hours," he called after Val.

Val looked back over her shoulder, half closed one eye, and received a broad grin in return.

It was from Hugh Malcolm that Val learned the significance of Kate's party. Kate had planned something more impressive to celebrate the seventy-eighth consecutive week of his play, "End of Tears," which was two weeks hence. But —

"You read about the fire, of course. Nasty mess. They've found another theater, but it had to be completely rewired. There was nothing to do but suspend activities last night and tonight, and Kate decided to hold her little blowout two weeks in advance —so that Leslie and Winifred could be here, you see."

Val hadn't read either the morning or afternoon paper at home and knew nothing about the fire.

"But yesterday's papers were full of it."

"I haven't seen a paper for days and days. Coming to New York was much too important to permit of other interests. I've lived in a fever of excitement for weeks."

He looked at her, thoughtfully, said after a moment, "You don't appear excited to me," and thought again how young and fresh she was. The germ of the idea he was presently to consider of tremendous importance, to him at least, was developing rapidly, but he was only vaguely aware of it as yet. This young cousin of Kate's was an exceptionally interesting child, and altogether lovely. He wondered how much attention he could show her before, in common with most women he knew, she misinterpreted his interest.

He told her about the fire. "But let's talk about you," he said, smiling. "You're spending the winter with Kate?"

Val shook her head. "We're here to shop. My aunt's housekeeper and I. We leave Friday afternoon." She wondered suddenly if she should tell him why she was here to shop—that a month hence she would be Mrs. Robert Greeley and that this was probably the last real party she would ever attend. And then she remembered she hadn't even told Kate.

"So soon?" Hugh said, and was conscious of a faint sense of regret. "I'm sorry you aren't staying, Val."

She turned her dark eyes full upon him. Then she smiled. "You aren't really. You must be thinking I'm a nuisance—breaking in on your party this way."

"Nothing of the kind."

"You needn't be polite. I like people who say what they think."

A grin spread on his wide mouth. "So do I, and I've said what I thought. I'm sorry you aren't staying the winter in New York." The firelight played with the red of her hair; he thought he had never seen hair quite like it before. "Do you believe me now, Val?"

She regarded him, gravely, then then turned her eyest to the flickering fire, thinking, "If I weren't engaged to Robert, and if I could live here with Kate, and if you were really interested in me and not just being nice to a young girl—" Not moving, she said, "It's so much more fun coming to New York occasionally and finding everything strange and exciting. If I stayed here all winter, I'd probably be fed up with it."

"I doubt that. There's always something new, Val," Hugh said and was rather startled to find himself thinking of all the things he would do to keep her from becoming fed up with New York.

Val's eyes came away from the fire and smiled at him. After a moment she rose and went off to look for Kate.

Her search took her to the kitchen where she did not find Kate, but surprised Guy Williams and Bret Gallishaw in a whispered conference. They both started, and Val would have turned and gone out had not Bret abruptly departed by the other door.

"Don't push, don't crowd," Guy said. "Come on in quietly and you'll not be molested. The great Gallishaw was just telling me a slightly off-color story."

Val thought, "You don't have to lie about it—whatever it was." She watched him mixing things for a little. Then: "Isn't there a maid or something around to do this?"

His rather plain, boyish face registered amazement. "A maid—doing a job like this? You wouldn't send a taxi driver to take out your grandmother's appendix, would you?" But after a little he said, "If you want the bare facts—" offering her a cigaret, putting them away when she shook her head—"the truth of the matter is that I find this the most comfortable room in the house. I like a prize-fight and I could even do with a little war, but psychic conflict gives me the rickets." He looked up quickly. "Can't you feel it in the air?"

Val said, grinning, "I must not be susceptible. I don't feel anything."

"That's right," he nodded, "you wouldn't. You'd have to know all these mopes to get in." He studied her face in silence, observed casually, "You can't be sure about such things, but I think you're one of the prettiest girls I've ever seen."

Val flushed. "Surely there's no question about it," she said, smiling. After a moment she said, "I'm grateful, of course—but you were about to tell me about your psychic conflicts. Or weren't you?"

"No, I was not," he said bluntly; then, "But I will. Get your coat and we'll trot down to Pete's place."

Pete's place . . . The very name promised adventure. If only she could forget Robert and Aunt Mahala and Kate's party and go out with Guy to all the Pete's places in New York—the noisy, exciting, dangerous places.

Guy, watching the changing lights in her dark eyes, was visibly disappointed when she shook her head, slowly. "Sorry," she said. "I only wish I could."

"Afraid?"

"Perhaps."

"Of course you are. You're afraid of Kate."

"All right," said Val, "I'm afraid of Kate."

He dropped his cigaret on the inlaid linoleum, stamped on it, looked up again: "And I had an idea you were regular."

Val saw the color rising in his face. He was really angry.

"Don't behave like a spoiled baby," she said, quietly.

He grunted, unpleasantly. "I'll believe any way I choose, if anybody should ask you."

"Of course you will." She thought her voice lacked the contempt she had tried to put into it. "Even," she said, "if you make a fool of yourself doing it."

For a moment he glared at her—then, with a short little laugh, he flung out of the room.

Val thought, "Ye gods, I'm a worse baby than he is. Why didn't I keep quiet?"

JUST NUTS

The DEBUNKER

By John Harvey Furbay, Ph.D.

Snakes are animals of the shade, and most of them cannot live long when exposed to the direct rays of the sun. Even a rattlesnake will curl up and die if left in the sun a half an hour or less. Snakes are rare in desert countries, and are found only where shade is available.

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

THE ART OF PRINTING.
I—Block Books.

What a difference it would make if we did not have the printing press! The art of printing ranks in importance with the steam engine and electric power. It has made possible the spread of knowledge to all people.

Lady "writing a book" several hundred years ago.

There were books long before the printing press, hundreds and hundreds of books. The olden Egyptians wrote them on papyrus, the Babylonians on clay tablets. People of the middle ages in Europe had hand-written books on parchments and on vellum.

Yes, there were books in old Europe, but they were not owned by people in general. They cost a great deal, and a man had to be rich to have a library of books. We read about payment of a sum equal to hundreds of dollars in our money for a single hand-written copy of the Bible. That may seem a great deal, but we must remember that it took a man a long time to write down all the words of the Bible. It is estimated that to do so took from one to three years.

The common custom was for long books to be copied by groups of men, each handling several chapters. One rich man set 45 persons to work copying books. By the end of two years, 200 books were ready for him.

Monks of the middle ages did much of the work of copying, though there were others (including at least a few women) who knew the art of writing, and who produced books for monasteries or private households.

It appears that the art of printing was learned first in eastern Asia, probably in the section now known as China. Some believe that the Chinese printed books 1,300 years ago.

The first printed books in Europe were "block books." They were made with the help of blocks of wood on which pictures and letters had been carved. Before carving the blocks, it was usual to make pictures and words on thin paper, then to turn the paper over and place it on a block. With a sharp knife, a man could cut through the paper and into the wood, on either side of each line. The final result was a kind of engraving or "cut."

When ink was placed on the wood block, and paper was pressed against it, a page of a book could be printed. Then other copies could be made—hundreds of them. The "block books" did not have many pages, and for the most part they were composed of pictures. Some were published in Europe before the birth of Christopher Columbus.

A famous example of block books is "The Poor Man's Bible." It covered only a small portion of the Bible, and was made up chiefly of pictures, with a few words on each page. The printing of block books was popular in Holland, Germany and England.

Husbands of Leaguers Neglected As Carnival Ball Plans Are Made

By Sally Forth.

THERE should be some compensation, it seems, for the harassed husbands of Junior Leaguers who have had to live and eat to the tune of the Dogwood's Festival's carnival ball for the past three weeks. You see, the Junior Leaguers, who are sponsoring the affair, are bending every effort to make the ball a grand success next Wednesday evening, and every waking moment is filled with devising plans and evolving new ideas toward that end.

Witness the poor husband who has heard about it practically all of his waking hours since his wife's services were enlisted, and who was awakened from a deep sleep the other night by a wild shout. His enthusiastic wife, who had never gone to sleep, had just thought of a grand idea for the carnival ball!

"Son" Richardson, whose wife, Catherine, is chairman of the affair, has threatened to discontinue his telephone until after the ball is over. Henry Grady Jr., who has the distinction of being husband to the League president, complains that it has been weeks since he has been able to carry on a coherent conversation with his wife. Every time he ventures to ask her valued opinion on some question of crucial importance, she not only does not hear him, but she counters with a question of her own, such as what does he think of the idea of having eight instead of six sideshows, or does he think it would offend Vincent Lopez's sense of the fitness of things if a calliope were played in the sideshow during intermission?

And it seems that husbands are not the only sufferers. Little Bill Ogden, who has been sick in bed and has not been allowed to go out much, has found his pretty mother, Ethel Hunter Ogden, so preoccupied that she has not had time to devote her usual attention to him. Last week he was heard to complain: "Mother, I wish you'd go into some other business. Junior League takes so much of your time."

But the climax came Saturday evening when a prominent young matron was seen dancing with a very important eastern executive at the Driving Club dinner-dance. The couple came to a full stop in the middle of the dance, and the gentleman was seen to take a huge roll of bills from his pocket, from which he peeled several and presented them to his partner. The lady had kept up an incessant and most animated conversation prior to this gesture, and there was much speculation as to whether the money was a bribe for a moment of quiet dancing, for she really is a very beautiful dancer.

Later it was learned that all the conversation had been on the subject of the approaching carnival ball, for the lady in question is also deeply engrossed in the plans for the affair. She proved such an excellent advance agent that the visiting executive was impressed.

"If the affair is going to be as good as you say," he told her, "it couldn't be worth less than $25 and i refuse to pay less for a ticket."

Hence the exchange of money.

MRS. W. R. NEEL was comfortably ensconced for a quiet evening at home when the telephone rang with a quite persistent tingle. When the maid returned to inform her that Athens was calling, Mrs. Neel was panicky, for she was afraid that something had happened to her charming daughter, Mary Warren, who is enrolled at the University. She sprang from her chair and dashed to the receiver to hear the jubilant voice of one of Mary's classmates speaking over the wire. "Mary's just been elected president of the entire co-ordinate campus," the voice shrieked, and Mrs. Neel breathed a sigh of relief.

This was about the highest honor that Mary could have won, and she is quite capable of fulfilling the ensuing duties. She is quite a charming brunet, and she is highly esteemed by her many University friends. She graduated from North Fulton last year and is now a freshman at the college. She is a member of the Alpha Delta Pi fraternity, and has acquired many other honors during her year at Georgia.

Prominent Artist Is Atlanta Visitor For Festival Week

Atlanta boasts among its most interesting visitors here this week Philip H. Giddens, prominent American artist, who is en route to his New York studio from Palm Beach, where he spent the winter season. While in the fashionable Florida resort Mr. Giddens did a number of portraits of the nation's leading figures in financial and social realms. The artist's exhibition of etchings and water color portraits at the Society of Four Arts in Palm Beach was one of the outstanding cultural events held in that fashionable resort this past winter. The occasion attracted the presence of a number of celebrated artists and prominent members of Palm Beach society.

Mr. Giddens' work has received high praise from well-known critics and have merited conspicuous hanging in important museums in Europe as well as in America. Only recently Mr. Giddens' work was displayed in the Grand Salon in Paris and in the Royal Academy in London, where the artist plans to spend the forthcoming summer.

Mr. Giddens is a former Georgian, having graduated from Georgia Tech in 1920, after which he spent a number of years studying art in Paris under leading masters. He is receiving a cordial welcome from his wide circle of Atlanta friends and during the week he will be honor guest in a number of social gaieties and will attend the brilliant social functions given in connection with the Dogwood Festival.

CORLEY IS FETED AT BIRTHDAY PARTY

East Point's Oldest Resident Celebrates 97th Anniversary at Home.

A family reunion dinner party yesterday marked the birthday anniversary of East Point's oldest resident, "Uncle John" Corley, who passed his 97th milestone last Thursday.

The party was held at his home at 316 West Washington street, where he has lived for the past several years with his daughter, Mrs. Lottie Davis.

"Uncle John," who has read almost every issue of The Constitution since it was first published in 1868, greeted scores of visitors who called at his home prior to the dinner. All visitors signed his "birthday register," a large book in which congratulations were recorded.

The youngest member of the family to attend the affair was Louise Henderson, three-year-old daughter of Mrs. J. W. Henderson, of 286 Logan street, who is the youngest of "Uncle John's" 10 great grandchildren.

Members of four generations of the family attended.

Miss Hermina Baum Weds Mr. Wolf At Noon Ceremony at Standard Club

Miss Hermina Baum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Baum, became the bride of Julian Wolf, of Atlanta, formerly of Cincinnati, Ohio, at a beautiful ceremony solemnized at the noon hour yesterday at the Standard Club on Ponce de Leon avenue. A company of interested friends and relatives assembled for the marriage service which was read by Dr. David Marx.

The ceremony took place in the reception room at the right of the entrance of the club, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The marriage vows were said before an altar formed of tall palms, against which were silhouetted white wicker floor baskets filled with white calla lilies. Myriads of cathedral candles, held in seven-branched candelabra, burned amid the foliage. The mantel in the room was centered with a mound of multi-colored spring flowers, and urns filled with similar blossoms adorned the tables and window recesses.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Farley Berman, who acted as matron of honor. She was beautifully gowned in dusty pink crepe, trimmed with intricate miniature cartwheels of the same material, and worn with a wide-brimmed hat of French blue straw caught with carnations of a dusty pink shade. Her slippers were dyed to match her gown, and other accessories were in blue. Completing her costume was an old-fashioned nosegay of summer garden flowers in Dresden shades.

Arthur Richard, of Cincinnati, served as Mr. Wolf's best man, and the ushers were Farley Berman and Melvin May, of Charleston, W. Va.

Samuel Baum gave his daughter in marriage. She presented a radiant picture in her ensemble of soft French blue crepe, collared in handsome blue fox fur. Worn with the costume was a filmy lace blouse of a lighter tone of blue, a navy blue felt hat and accessories. The bride's flowers were a bouquet of Roosevelt roses and valley lilies.

Immediately following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Baum, parents of the bride, entertained at a beautifully appointed wedding breakfast in the ballroom of the club. Mrs. Baum received the guests wearing a handsome ensemble of brown silk crepe, printed in a tiny figure, and worn with a wide-brimmed hat of brown straw. Her flowers were a shoulder cluster of gardenias. Mrs. Moses Wolf, of Cincinnati, mother of the groom, who assisted in receiving, wore navy blue sheer crepe with hat and accessories to match. Her flowers were gardenias.

The guests were seated for breakfast at a long table which extended the length of the ballroom. Gracing the center was a sparkling fountain, the base of which was banked with pastel-tinted spring flowers, including roses, sweet peas, snapdragons, tulips, valley lilies, and lilacs. At intervals down the length of the table were mounds of similar blossoms. The handsome white wedding cake, embossed in orange blossoms, centered a separate table and was surrounded by Dresden shaded sweet peas.

Mr. Wolf and his bride left for a wedding journey to Havana, Cuba. Upon their return the first of May, they will reside at the home of the bride on Pace's Ferry road during the absence of her parents, who sail at that time to spend the summer in Europe.

Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Moses Wolf, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richard, Arthur Richard Jr., Allen Magrist and Maurie Orum, all of Cincinnati; Mrs. Abe Rothstein, of Louisville, Ky.; Melvin May, of Charleston, W. Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Berman Mr and Mrs. Jake Berman, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Held and Miss Elizabeth Cryer, all of Anniston, Ala.; Kesler Goldstein, of LaGrange, Ga., and Dr. and Mrs. Leon Rosen, of Montgomery, Alabama.

The Seniors Celebrate With a Graduation Dinner.

By FLORENCE La GANKE

The senior class was having its graduation dinner. During the worst part of the depression the classes had held the dinner in the school gymnasium and the mothers had prepared the meal. All of this helped to keep the price down. Now that times were better, the class felt they would like to have a more formal affair. Their mothers demurred, but it was finally agreed that the school gymnasium would be used, the mothers would still prepare the food, but that the graduating class would dress up for the occasion. That seemed to be what they really wanted. The boys voted to wear flannel trousers and dark coats. That was simple, because these outfits would be worn many times during the summer.

The girls voted for long dresses, "swishy ones," they said they wanted. They voted to carry small nosegays that had an old-fashioned air about them. Some of the girls wore flowers in their hair, and most of them had capes. One very nice one was of quilted silk. It had been made at home and was copied from one shown in a smart downtown shop. The girl did the quilting herself. It was not hard to do, because it was nothing but large diamonds criss-crossing the entire surface.

The menu for the dinner was quite simple, but exceptionally good.

The first course was well chilled cranberry juice. They chose this because the class colors were red and gold. They might have used chilled canned pineapple juice.

Then came the main course. This was fried chicken with fresh green peas in butter, faintly suggestive of fresh mint sprigs. With the peas were served creamed potatoes, topped with tiny figures, 1, 9, 3, 6, cut from canned pimientoes. There were crunchy rolls and some of the town's famous strawberry jam.

The salad was a molded gelatin one. It had chopped cabbage, celery, green peppers, red peppers embedded in the well acidulated gelatin base. And the dessert was vanilla ice cream with plenty of fresh strawberries, well sweetened and piled on top. The mothers almost selected strawberry shortcake, but finally voted for the ice cream. There was coffee in honor of the graduates. Heretofore the school children had had milk or cocoa. Truly they were growing up.

Pattern 4002 is available in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 takes 3 5-8 yards 39-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Has Many Uses.

A cooky sheet is a good investment. Not only does it do a better job of baking biscuits and cookies, but it's a good thing to set baking cups on in the oven. Or use it to hold individual molds of gelatin in the refrigerator.

Wife Preservers.

A little cinnamon, preferably in the stick, or thin slices of lemon or orange peel give a delicious flavor when cooked with dried fruits.

My Day

By ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

THE WHITE HOUSE, WASHINGTON, D. C.—Why does plowing begin so late in Virginia? Perhaps the majority of the people along the river road which we followed yesterday are fishermen. In any case, there were few people in the fields. We noticed that oysters are as much advertised here as clams are along the New England roads.

Beautiful as the countryside is, the land looked poor to me, except in the cases of some of the big plantations which we passed, where more intelligent use of the land is evidently being practiced.

Great strides have been made in Williamsburg since I was there last. The college campus, with the beautifully restored Christopher Wren building, with its garden at the back where the trees are planted giving promise of shaded walks in the future; the street itself, with its stores and theater—all are most interesting.

The Governor's palace, I think, attracts me more than anything else. The garden is so enchanting, the kitchen with the two old colored women sitting in it and a fire burning on the hearth, gives one a sense of real living.

How much luxury the rich had in those days, and yet how much discomfort there was all about them. Even the Governor had to cross a courtyard to reach his bath, which was a sunken basin of brick in a little round house. How they ever got any hot food from the kitchen to the state dining room is a mystery, but then it is also a mystery to me at Mt. Vernon.

The jail is one of the things I had not seen before, and with a little more age it will seem real. We did our sightseeing before 6 o'clock and then Miss Dickerman, Miss Goodwin and five girls from Tod Hunter met us for dinner. We spent a pleasant evening together.

We breakfasted at 7:30 and started for Washington at 8:10. We came back via Richmond, which is a little shorter, and were back in plenty of time to dress and greet our luncheon guests, Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Hasbrouck, of New York, their two children and three young men who are working here in various departments.

This afternoon the Pen Women and Composers Group are to come to tea and give a program at 4 o'clock, so the day is a busy one.

A huge basket of bluebonnet from the Department of Information of the Texas Centennial celebration has just arrived—they are lovely even in a vase, what they must be like growing wild in the fields!

Emory Chapel Provides Setting For Rockmore-Lange Marriage

The Emory theological chapel formed the setting for the beautiful ceremony at which Miss Letitia Rockmore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Boynton Rockmore, became the lovely bride of Dr. Harry Lange Jr., yesterday at the twilight hour. The Rev. Nat G. Long, pastor of the Glenn Memorial Methodist church, read the marriage service. The date was chosen because it marked the 26th wedding anniversary of the bride's parents.

The altar was banked high with palms and cybotium ferns, which were interspersed with seven-branched candelabra holding white cathedral tapers. Silhouetted against the background of foliage was a central floor basket filled with stately Easter lilies. Garlands of southern smilax festooned the altar rail and the wall brackets. Tall clusters of Easter lilies, tied with white satin ribbons, marked the pews reserved for the members of the family connection.

The wedding music was furnished by Mrs. Thad Morrison, pianist, and Mrs. W. B. Griffith, harpist. The selections included "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," from Samson and Delilah; "Meditations," from Thais; "Liebestraum," Schubert's "Serenade," "Ave Maria," by Gounod; and "Oh, Promise Me." "The Rosary" was played on the harp during the taking of the vows.

The bride's only attendants were Miss Rosalind Ware, maid of honor, and Miss Nell Starr, of Newnan, bridesmaid. They were gowned in diaphanous gowns of pale yellow uet posed over yellow taffeta. The bodices were cut with high necklines in front and low-pointed decolletages in the back. A dainty feature of the gowns was the clusters of pink and blue forget-me-nots tied with narrow blue ribbons which were caught at intervals on the slips and adorned the tiny puffed sleeves. The attendants' slippers repeated the color note of blue and they carried arm bouquets of yellow roses, blue delphinium, and pink snapdragons, tied with yellow ribbons.

Bride Enters.

Glenn Johnson acted as best man for Dr. Lange and Andrew Morrow was the groomsman. The ushers included Morgan Sutton, Dr. Carl Garver, Dr. William Crowe and Dr. John Peacock.

The lovely young bride entered the chapel with her father, Emmett Boynton Rockmore, who gave her in marriage. Emphasizing her dainty brunet beauty was her wedding gown of lustrous white satin, which closely molded her slender figure, and featured a becoming square-cut neckline finished with a collar of rose point lace. The long satin sleeves were closely fitted from the wrist to the elbow and adorned with rows of tiny satin buttons. A panel built into the gown in the back extended to form a long, graceful train. The bride's veil, fashioned of exquisite Brussels lace which she brought from Europe on a recent trip, was posed over layers of illusion tulle, which fell in soft folds from a becoming cap of tulle outlined with a tiny wreath of orange blossoms. Her only ornament was an antique gold locket which was worn by her maternal grandmother, the late Mrs. J. N. Haynes, on her wedding day. Completing the bridal ensemble was a bouquet of white sweet peas and valley lilies, arranged in cascade effect.

Following the wedding ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Rockmore entertained at an informal reception at their home on Rockdale road. The guests were limited to the members of the wedding party, the family connections and the guests from a distance.

Receiving Party.

The bride and groom and the hosts received the guests, standing before an effective arrangement of palms, interspersed with floor baskets filled with white roses. Mrs. Rockmore chose for the occasion a handsome gown of ashes of roses lace, offset with a cluster of Johanna Hill roses. Mrs. J. H. Lange, mother of the groom, was gowned in gray chiffon and her flowers were pink roses.

The table in the dining room was covered with a lace cloth and centered with a low silver bowl filled with white roses and valley lilies. A beautiful three-tiered wedding cake, embossed in valley lilies, rested upon a mound of ferns, and silver candlesticks held white burning tapers.

Miss Sarah Bright Gracey, of Augusta, kept the bride's book, and Mrs. Joel Cloud, Mrs. Graham George, Mrs. H. G. Hackney, of St. Louis, and Mrs. J. G. Rockmore assisted in entertaining.

Dr. and Mrs. Lange left for a wedding trip to Daytona, Fla. The bride traveled in a three-piece ensemble of rose beige herringbone wool, the coat collared in natural beige fox. Her blouse was of eggshell, and her brown felt hat repeated this color note in the trim. Other accessories were of brown.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Lange, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Henderson, Mrs. Minna Maxwell; Mrs. Minna Schroeder and Glenn Johnson, all of Savannah; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lange, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mrs. H. G. Hackney, of St. Louis; Miss Sarah Bright Gracey, of Augusta, and Albert Dobie, of Worcester, Mass.

Cooney extends an invitation to presidents of garden clubs exhibiting floats in the Dogwood parade, members of the board of directors of the Dogwood Association and their wives and chairmen of each committee of events to attend a tea at her home, 1810 Ponce de Leon avenue, immediately after the parade today.

MAY ROBSON HIDES AGE ON BIRTH ANNIVERSARY

HOLLYWOOD, April 19.—(UP)—Seventy-one-year-old May Robson celebrated a birthday anniversary today but she wouldn't admit her age.

Comfortably curled in a deep, roomy chair in her pleasant little West Hollywood home, the chuckling old lady observed it was "wonderful to be still so young."

"Been on the stage 53 years," she sighed, "and never missed a season. That's a good record, isn't it?"

Wholesale Cash and Carry Introduced by Cojack Co.

Organization Prepared To Supply Atlanta Merchants' Needs at Low, Profit-Making Prices; Warehouse Located in Mid-Town.

The Cojack Company, Inc., its president, Walter D. Couch, announced Saturday, has entered the cash and carry wholesale field and is now prepared to supply merchants in Atlanta's trade territory a full line of both staple and fancy groceries in well known brands at prices which will enable them to compete on price with the large chains.

The Atlanta Warehouse, an adjunct of Cojack Company, Inc., situated at 51 Alabama street, S. W., Mr. Couch states, is fully stocked and equipped to render a speedy service to grocers in the Atlanta trade territory. The warehouse is in personal charge of N. O. Arrington, who has had many years of experience in this work, and who is widely and favorably known to grocery merchants.

Situated less than three blocks from Five Points, the Atlanta Warehouse has a side-track at the rear of its three-story building, with loading docks on the old Alabama street level, and ample parking space.

Within the building, Mr. Couch points out, high speed electric elevator service and other facilities serve to make possible a rapid handling of orders, large or small.

Economical operation and an unusually rapid turnover of stocks, it is stated, combine with a great purchasing power to make possible prices designed to produce excellent profits to the grocer-customer.

In addition to nationally known brands of groceries, the organization carries in stock all popular items of store and market equipment, including wire display baskets, shopping baskets, tape sealing machines, platters, cutlery, price tags, show card ink, brushes, etc.

Mr. Couch invites Atlanta retail grocers to visit the Cojack Company's warehouse headquarters and to investigate this new, speed and profit-building service designed for them.

Black Rock Golf Course Offers Thrills for Expert and Dub Alike

For those who glory in standing up to the tee and facing the challenge of an open over-water carry (or a plop in the lake), or who thrill to the sight of a little white pellet sailing down a broad, well-mown fairway, the Black Rock Golf Club, situated five miles out Campbellton road, provides all that the true golfing heart could desire.

The Black Rock course, declares G. H. A. Thomas, manager, has experienced a constantly increasing popularity.

Just a bit tougher than the average, and yet not too difficult for the cub, the Black Rock course is guaranteed to give any golfer a new interest in the game. It is within easy reach of the city, yet, while it is played by hundreds, its distance from Atlanta makes it seldom so crowded as to spoil the game for the erratic golfer.

The Black Rock course with a rolling fairway and 18 velvety grass greens—nestles in the heart of a wooded, 500-acre tract, surrounding 35 acres of shimmering lake expanse which adds a multiple challenge to the driving eye. The lake's winding bank provides several overwater carries to test the skill of expert and dub alike.

Mr. Thomas states the Black Rock fairways, broad, sunlit yardage (6,253), where well-placed traps and bunkers await the hapless golfer, are in perfect condition—which, by the way, is the rule rather than the exception on this popular course. They are kept cleanly mown at all times.

The flawless greens—fast and ready to test the sharpest putting eye—offer to the golfer a series of challenges which call into play his keenest judgment. While some of these greens are level, others have that almost imperceptible roll which decives the eye.

As has been stated, the Black Rock Club's grounds provide ample facilities for a diversity of sports and other interests

Its clubhouse includes a splendid dancing floor, and food and drink are available. The club, open to the public, caters to both business and private outings, and Mr. Thomas invites inquiry at any time on arrangements for such parties.

For the golfer who has "played all those other courses," the Black Rock Golf club's sporty and splendidly conditioned 18-hole layout offers something refreshingly different—a course that is just a bit tougher than usual for the dub and which, at the same time, gives the expert a real test of his golfing skill.

Not merely a golf club, the Black Rock grounds include swimming, boating and fishing.

ELLIS ROOFING CO. LAUDS DURABILITY

Ru-Ber-Oid Products Available in Varied Range of Designs, Colors

The winter's sleet, snow, ice and rain, and the spring's lusty gales have brought a greater recognition of the qualities of the Tite-on-Ru-ber-oid interlocking shingle than ever before, declares R. P. Ellis, executive head of the Ellis Roofing Company, 686 Greenwood avenue, N. E.

"It is significant to note," says Mr. Ellis, "that throughout the past winter, with its repeated freezes, and the early spring, with its high winds, none of the several hundreds of Tite-on roofing jobs in the city was disturbed by the elements."

This, he points out, is but another unanimous verdict in favor of the Tite-on—a substantiation, so to speak, of its manufacturer's claims that it is stormproof.

When Mr. Ellis says: "A roof is no better than its application," it is a tribute to Ru-Ber-Oid roofing materials as well as to the capability of his own roofing staff, many of whom have worked with him for many years.

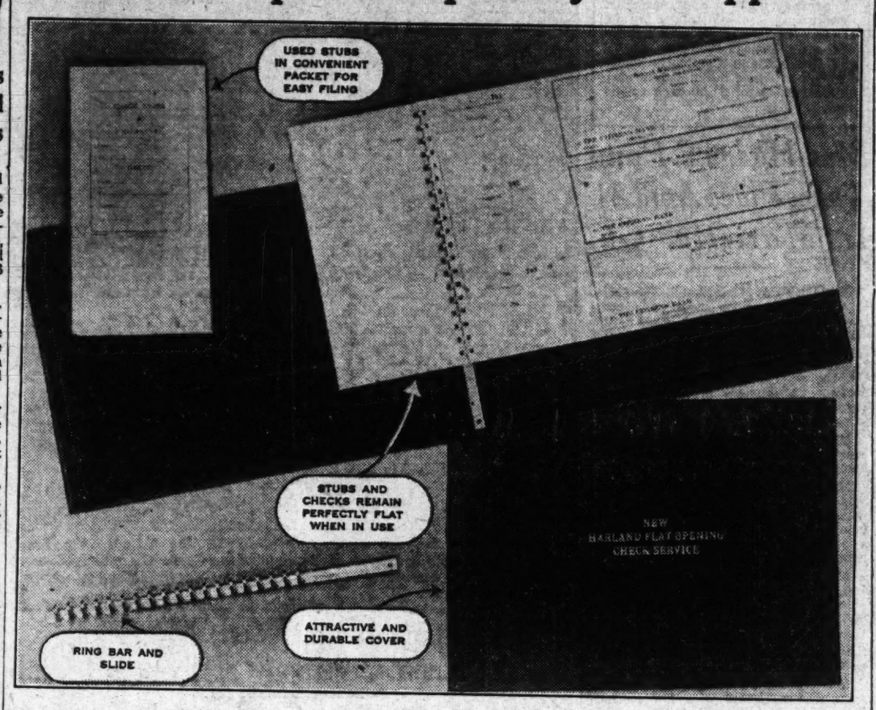

It is conceded that for safety and durability, head lap, side lap and quality of material are the most important points to consider, he asserts. When applied, the Tite-on shingle has a 3 1-2-inch head lap and a 4-inch side lap. Each shingle is held secure by four zinc-coated nails and wo concealed locks, which lie in a natural position. They are not folder under, nor do they depend on metal clips or clasps, either of which has a tendency to weaken or tear out. The name "Ru-Ber-Oid" assures high quality material, Mr. Ellis states. The base of these shingles is a tough, wiry roofing felt, thoroughly saturated with weather-defying asphalt. A double coating of asphalt is added to protect the felt fibers and seal the saturation in. Then a surfacing of colorful mineral granules is firmly imbedded in the upper coating, affording added weather protection. The final proof of genuine Ruberoid quality and durability rests with the service record of Ruberoid roofs, thousands of which have been in service from 20 to 40 years.

The Ru-Ber-Oid line also includes the famous Dutchlok shingle, which furnishes the widest side lap (4 1-2 inches) of any shingle of its type, and which offers virtually every one of the Tite-on features. It also includes genuine Ru-Ber-Oid roll roofing, which for more than 40 years has maintained a widespread popularity and demand as well as many other numerous types of composition shingles, and a complete line of the Eternit asbestos-cement shingles and siding.

Mr. Ellis invites inquiry upon Tite-on shingles or any of the other Ru-Ber-Oid products.

The Ellis Roofing Company will be glad to give an estimate without obligation and is prepared to assist in obtaining a Federal Housing loan, which makes it very easy to buy a new roof—no payment for 30 days after the job is finished; then very small monthly payments that may run as long as 36 months.

Harland Flat-Opening Check Service Meets With Widespread Popularity and Approval

The photo above shows in a self-explanatory form the new and increasingly popular flat-opening check service produced and distributed by the John H. Harland Company, lithographers and printers, which maintains a factory at Highland avenue and Jackson street and a retail store at 8 Pryor street, in downtown Atlanta.

A sure test of the merit of ar article is repeat sales, declares John H. Harland, president of the John H. Harland Company, lithographing, printing and office supply establishment.

"The reorders we receive daily, as well as increasing new sales, consitute convincing proof of customer approval of the new Harland flat-opening check books," he asserts, in support of this point. "The distinctive features of this product, together with the very reasonable price, have resulted not only in orders in increasing numbers, but have provoked a large number of letters of approval from users throughout the southeast."

The company's lithographing and printing departments, housed in a specially constructed daylight building at the corner of Highland avenue and Jackson street, have been operating at capacity for several months past. Mr. Harland states, adding that prospects are bright that this pace will be kept up for many months to come.

In addition to the production of high-grade commercial, bank, insurance and security work, the John H. Harland Company specializes in color photo-lithography, and a number of unusual color jobs have been produced in recent weeks.

The company maintains a retail stationery store at 8 Pryor street, adjacent to the entrance of the Ten Pryor building, where all types of office appliances and supplies are stocked. Due to its convenient location, this store has long rendered an unusually complete service to Atlanta business offices, supplying their office needs. This department of the John H. Harland organization is under the direction of H. Grady Wilson, vice president and sales manager, and offices of the company are maintained at the same address.

Stress Laid by Atlanta Glass Co. On Use of Glass To Create 'Front'

Putting on a good front is always important and always pays, according to the Atlanta Glass Company, 80 Houston street, N. E., headquarters for glass for virtually every use and purpose.

Whether it be for automobile windows, store windows or store fronts, mirrors, or any of innumerable other purposes, it is pointed out, glass helps, to a marked extent, to make "front."

The Atlanta Glass Company, which serves not only Atlanta and all of Georgia, but the adjacent states, sees the store-front—but one of its specialties—as one of the most impressive illustrations of what it means by "front." Numerous stores, many of them in Atlanta, have been transformed from obsolete, characterless studies in early-century architecture to vividly modern and attractive establishments, through the use and combination of decorative and structural glass, two of the company's outstanding products.

"This trend has been particularly noted in the drug store, ladies' wear, bar and restaurant fields," it is said, and the change, in practically every case, has resulted in greater trade attraction.

In addition to the necessary glass and structural glass (which, by the way, is available in a very wide and selective array of colors and decorative effects), the Atlanta Glass Company is prepared to supply the modern aluminum and bronze store front metal also.

The company is equally well prepared to furnish every requirement for automobile safety glass and its installation, and renders a specialized service to dealers and garages as well as to the public in this field.

Glass for household windows, plate glass for office and store windows, specially reinforced skylight glass, variously patterned glass for office partitions, structural glass of all kinds, and flesh-tinted, blue, green or white mirrors, cut to suit individual needs, may be obtained from the Atlanta Glass Company in any required quantity. In addition, the company renders another specialized service in furnishing glass tops for desks and furniture, each piece cut exactly to fit.

The company renders a speedy and efficient delivery service to all parts of the southeast, and invites calls, for order or estimate, on any glass need.

FAIRYLAND PAGEANTRY ATTRACTS BIG CROWD

Presentation at 8 O'Clock Tonight Expected To Be Well Attended.

A splendid crowd attended the first large outdoor event of the Dogwood Festival yesterday afternoon to witness the spectacle of 1,000 persons participating in the Fairyland Pageant at Grant field.

A veritable fairyland it was with the big cast presenting Cinderella, Old King Cole and Mother Hubbard, who had her dog along. The voices of the players were transmitted clearly by an amplifying system to all parts of the big field.

The presentations were ably staged and the settings left nothing to be desired. The background, across the entire stadium, was a magnificent castle from which the players emerged.

The pageant was attended by the Dogwood Princess, Miss June Spalding, North Fulton High school student, and she expressed her delight at the splendid manner in which technical difficulties had been surmounted in presenting the affair and providing for the comfort of the crowds.

Today's presentation, set for 8 o'clock tonight, it is expected, will draw an even larger audience than that of yesterday. The big stadium provides ample seating accommodations, it was pointed out, and the day is expected to be an exceptional one.

The weatherman predicted considerably warmer temperatures than those of yesterday, with a maximum temperature this afternoon of 72 degrees expected, 10 degrees above that of yesterday.

Medals to the poster contest entrants were presented yesterday by Luke Arnold, secretary to the mayor.

The fairly high wind yesterday caused considerable trouble in the handling of the extensive scenery but the difficulties were remedied and no damage was caused to the expensive drops.

2 KILLED AS PLANE HITS POWER LINE

Harvey Official, Wife Are Burned Beyond Recognition on Mountain.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., April 19.—(AP) Frederick H. Harvey, vice president of the Harvey Eating House, and his wife, Elizabeth, 31, crashed to death in their airplane on the rugged Allegheny mountains today.

Flames flared through their battered ship, burning the bodies almost beyond recognition.

The ship struck electric power lines near the top of a mountain and apparently plunged nose-first into the ground.

Gasoline and oil poured from the ship spreading fire throughout a clearing.

Residents of mountain farms told of hearing the ship flying low overhead. A moment later there was a crash. Then another.

Farmers rushed up the mountain and found the ship in flames. They tossed cups and buckets of water in an effort to prevent the fire from consuming the bodies.

The coroner said he found the charred body of a pet dog clasped tightly in Mrs. Harvey's arms.

The plane crashed about 60 miles northeast of Chestnut ridge, where the TWA's Sun Racer plunged into a mountain April 7, killing 12 persons.

FAIR, WARM WEATHER FORECAST FOR TODAY

Fair and warmer weather will greet the city today for the second day of the first annnal Atlanta Dogwood Festival, according to the forecast issued at Candler airport weather bureau last night.

Yesterday's temperature range was between 34 degrees in the early morning and 64 degrees, recorded at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

STATE BAPTISTS SPLIT ON SOCIAL RESEARCH

Callaway Disputes Need of Bureau To Plan Aid for Unfortunate.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., April 19.—(AP)—A friendly debate has developed among several prominent Georgia Baptist leaders over whether the Southern Baptist convention should set up a social research bureau.

The proposal, advanced at the last convention of the church in Memphis, Tenn., by Dr. McNeil Poteat, of Raleigh, N. C., has been discussed recently in the Christian Index, Georgia Baptist publication.

Editor O. P. Gilbert, of the Index, advocated establishment of the bureau, to which the Rev. T. F. Callaway, pastor of the Thomasville Baptist church, replied in an article in the Index.

Gilbert, in his editorial, called attention to a news report on the eviction of tenant farmers and sharecroppers in Arkansas, and said the "situation calls for sympathetic investigation and co-operation."

He quoted a representative of the United Mine Workers as having charged landlords with evicting tenants because of their efforts to become organized.

Our People Are Farmers.

"Vast majority of our people are farmers and most negroes are Baptists," the editorial continued. "Why should these people be left to the tender mercies of the United Mine Workers of America, the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America and other organizations?"

(The Federal Council of Churches was described in the quoted report as having supplied tents for evicted families.)

Gilbert's editorial further said:

"It is a sorry dog that bites the hand that feeds it. Communism and other radical movements in this country are symptoms of a diseased body politic. The remedy is at hand if the church had an adventurous faith.

"Southern Baptists should hold to their faith, but they should not overlook the heavy burdens of the poor and unfortunate. The situation in Arkansas and other southern states call for a social research bureau."

Callaway said in his article:

"The fact that Dr. Gilbert and I may not see eye to eye as to the wisdom of such bureau does not mean, I think, that we are not equally concerned in solving the social evils that curse the world and thus lift the burdens that press the backs of suffering humanity. . . .

Differ on Means.

"That objective is a consummation we both devoutly wish for. Our difference is a question of method. He is honestly of the opinion that the solution will largely be in a bureau of social research. I am equally of the opinion that the proposal for the bureau of social research, as the plan is presented, has elements of dynamite in it to our Baptist harmony and progress, and that the best thing southern Baptists can do is to continue to major on the preaching of the gospel of Christ, which alone can change the sinful heart of man, give victory over the selfishness which is the basic cause of most of our social maladjustments, and bring in a proper social order, if it comes at all, as the result of a reformation born of regeneration."

Dr. J. C. Wilkinson, pastor of the First Baptist church, of Athens, said in his comment on the proposed social research bureau:

"If it increases our knowledge and practice of the spirit and teaching of Christ, it might lead the way to a great revival. If it fails it will be an honest effort to find a life that is in keeping with the life of Christ, even in an age of selfishness and confusion."

Atlanta and Knoxville Divide Pair of Contests, 6 to 2, 5 to 3

BREAK O' DAY!

By Ralph McGill

Jim Lindsey gave the boys his answer yesterday. There is a man who can use his cerebrum and his cerebellum.

They tossed the great old gentleman in there in a nine-inning game instead of the shorter seven-inning contest at Knoxville yesterday.

JIM LINDSEY.

And the big fellow won, 6 to 2, in a game which saw him pitch perhaps the smartest game turned in by an Atlanta pitcher this spring.

They got 11 hits off him, but he was not trying too hard with the big lead protecting him and the weather too cold for an arm which is at least middle-aged as arms go.

But in the pinches he was poison. And it is there we have the real test of pitching. When the pressure was on, Our Jim had them striking out and popping out and rolling out—gentle as lambs.

He struck out nine men, did Jim Lindsey. Nine of them. And practically every one of the nine swung vainly when Knoxville runs were needed.

He had plenty of wrinkles in his gray matter, has Our Jim. And the Croakers, as Mr. Bill Daly is wont to term the physicians, say that wrinkles indicate the development of the old brain. Jim Lindsey can think with his.

There was talk that Jim Lindsey might be let go. But surely that can't be true. It isn't customary to toss away a good pitcher. He isn't in shape yet. He'll get better. He won a lot of games last year that just had to be won. That's the type game he wins—the sort that have to be won.

LOVE ON THE DIAMOND.

Love on the diamond will not be an issue in the Southern association this year.

Mr. Ford Frick found it necessary to threaten his National league players with a $10 fine for each and every instance of fraternizing on the diamond.

But Judge John D. Martin thinks no such drastic measures will be necessary in the baseball circuit over which he rules.

"We went into that 10 or 12 years ago," said Judge Martin, in response to a query on the subject. "And we voted to have each manager instruct his team not to be too friendly with the rival team."

There has been a minimum of Romeo and Juliet atmosphere in the Dixie baseball league. The boys never fraternize a great deal. Brawls are few and far between. But there seems to be no inclination to carry out the mandate to love that neighbor.

Mr. Earl Mann, the Cracker president, agrees with Judge John D. Martin that the problem, if and when it appears, it one for the individual clubs to handle.

NOT SINCE BUSTER BROWN.

Not since Buster Brown, the glass-eating first-baseman of the Vols, was in the league, has there been any large measure of unfriendliness.

Buster was, at last reports, doing a jolt in the Missouri state prison for a slight case of assault and battery with intent.

He was a most unfriendly person. He worshipped Larry Doyle, the old Giant captain, who was the manager at Nashville when Brown was playing.

It was Brown's happy custom to come on the field each day, walk to the rival dugout, peer within it and ask, in hoarse tones:

"Do any of you blankety-blanks wish to fight?"

If they did not, he cursed them for being a set of yellow no-goods who would not supply a man with a little pleasure, and went on his way.

But, alas and alack, love came to the Buster. She was, as I recall, a heavily rouged young thing who used to sit in a box seat and cheer the Buster.

One day the Buster objected to an umpire's decision.

"If it wasn't for that little lady up in the stands," the Buster roared to the umpire, "I would bust you one on the kisser."

But love went. And so did the Buster. He was waived out of the league despite a batting average of more than .400. Which makes him an historical case.

ANOTHER ANSWER.

A few days ago they were wondering about the answer to the outfield problem.

Young Al Browne wrote that answer. He wrote it with a salvo of home runs, doubles and singles that drove in winning runs. And he kept it going yesterday, being extremely valuable in both games.

All of which is part of the romance in baseball. One never knows when there is a major league star under one of the minor league uniforms.

THE MOON SHINES ON.

The Moon came over the mountain, so to speak, in the second game at Knoxville yesterday.

Leo Moon beat us. Moon cannot win for a prosperous ball club. But at Knoxville, where his field is limited and his pay less than it would be in other cities, he is an extremely valuable chunker of the baseball.

The veteran left-hander has just about kept Knoxville in the league for the past season or so. And he was picked up for nothing after a broken arm, sustained while with New Orleans, had apparently wrecked his chances to pitch again.

At that our nine has won seven and lost two in the first nine games played this season. And that is enough to lead the league and stand as one of the greatest starts ever made by an Atlanta club.

Out at Plate On Unusual Double Play

First Pitcher; Key Is Present To See Opener

There was an unusual double play made by East Point in the game with Warren which opened the new field of the latter nine yesterday afternoon. The play is pictured above. Harper, Warren first baseman, is shown sliding in home with Stephenson, East Point catcher, poised to make the tag-out. Harper tried to make it home when Smith threw out Barnes. Warren won, 14-3. The center picture shows Mrs. V. P. Warren, wife of the president, tossing out the first ball. The picture on the right shows a scene before the game. Those pictured, left to right, L. C. Warren, Sam Ramsey, manager of East Point; Mayor James L. Key, Bob Hasty and V. P. Warren, president. Staff photos by George Cornett.

Warren Nine Wins City League Opener

Hasty's Pitching, Hard Hitting Stop East Point 14-3, as New Field Dedicated.

By Jack Troy.

The strong right arm of Manager Robert Keller Hasty wheeled the baseball in there mercilessly for nine innings yesterday as Warren Company inaugurated its splendid new field and won the opening game in the City league over East Point, 14 to 3.

There was a new loudspeaker system, the company's own band, plenty of fans and celebrities on all sides as the festivities began.

Mayor James L. Key, always the gentleman, politely refused to toss out the first ball. And so Mrs. V. P. Warren appropriately christened the field by throwing out the initial ball. L. C. Warren and Councilman Howard Haire were present at the opening.

The Warren nine showed its appreciation for having such a fine plant and such excellent directors by putting the game away in the second inning.

EVANS IN TROUBLE.

Pee Wee Evans, former Oglethorpe pitcher, ran into a flock of tough luck from the start.

A misjudged fly, allowing Parham to take two bases, started it off. Stith singled and Pope flied to center, scoring Parham, who tagged up. Stith scored after Dodgen's long fly to center.

Warren had its big inning next, being the second inning. Eidson walked and Barnes sacrificed. Forrest was safe on Smith's error. Bob Hasty struck out, and a double steal followed. Forrester set out for second and Eidson struck out for home. They both made it. Parham walked and Stith was hit by a pitched ball, filling the bases.

POPE HOMERS.

And up to the plate strode Home Run Baker in disguise, with two men out. Pope picked out a good pitch and parked it over the right field fence. This was the blow that killed East Point's chances for the day. Warren sewed up the old ball game on only two hits.

The East Point nine, which won 26 straight games last season, got two of the runs back in the third. Two errors and a hit were responsible.

Pee Wee Evans singled and Smith was safe on Parham's bad throw which allowed both runners to take extra bases. Evans scored on Clonts' infield out and Smith tallied on First Baseman Harper's error. He failed to touch first after taking a throw.

FINAL RUN.

The East Pointers scored their final run in the fourth. Hornsby was safe on Stith's error, Norton singled and Morris scored Hornsby with another single.

Bob Hasty's pitching and great fielding on the part of his team-mates held East Point in check the rest of the game. There were two great double plays.

On the other hand, Warren continued its assault on Evans, who might

Danno Facing Tough Test Here

Danno O'Mahony, colorful Irish grappler and co-claimant of the world's title with Dick Shikat, who was given a questionable decision over the County Cork boy in New York some weeks ago, is bent upon backing up his argument by taking on the best men in the game, and will meet one of his stiffest opponents in Orville Brown, the Kansas cowpuncher, here when they headline Henry Weber's first outdoor card of the season at Ponce de Leon ball park Wednesday night.

They will battle for 90 minutes or less, and Brown, who has built up a large following here by his skill, strength and avoidance of rough tactics, will be given the chance to inject himself into the title picture. Many fans are giving him close to an even chance against the handsome Irishman.

Karl Davis, the rough-house expert from Ohio State, takes on Pete Shue, stocky baldhead matman from Texas, in the hour-limit semi-windup Wednesday, while Frank Speer, ex-Jacket, and Jim Morgan, homicide dispenser, who aroused the fans to a high pitch of indignation against Zarynoff last week, meet in the 30-minute opener of what looks like one of the best cards of the year.

GEORGIA MEETS FLORIDA TODAY

ATHENS, Ga., April 19.—Coach Ben Clemons brings his Florida 'Gator nine to town Monday for the first two contests of the annual four-game series with the Georgia Bulldogs. The second tilt will be played Tuesday.

Seeking to raise the Bulldog record of four triumphs and three defeats, Coach Vernon Smith will use a battery of Duke Owen and J. C. Hall for the opener.

Having acquired a reputation as a hitter, Albert Collins will again start at third base. Jimmy Moore, injured in a preliminary workout at Montgomery several days ago, will be on the sidelines. Charlie Treadaway, who received an injured shoulder when attempting to slide home against Cincinnati, is a doubtful starter at second base.

The 'Gators suffered four defeats last week while the Bulldogs were losing twice in three encounters. Florida as did Georgia, lost to the Plainsmen in two games. Oglethorpe took two from the 'Gator outfit.

Hitting is still considerably below the expected level on the Red and Black crew. Errors, coming in the pinches, have also proven costly in several of their bids for victory.

Umpire Moriarty Benched by Injury

ST. LOUIS, April 19.—(AP)—George Moriarty, veteran umpire, benched himself because of injuries today and watched the St. Louis-Cleveland game from the bench while Kolls and Basil did a two-man job of officiating.

A taxicab door slammed on Moriarty's left hand as he started to enter Sportsmans park, put his famous paw out of commission and in bandages.

BARON BOBBLES GIVE TRIBE WIN

Sanford and Cihocki Spoil Well-Pitched Game By George.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 19.—(AP)—Errors by Sanford and Cihocki ruined a well-pitched game for Charley George, Baron left-hander, today and gave the Memphis Chicks a 4-to-2 victory.

George held the winners to six hits, several of them of the scratch variety, but the Barons were unable to hit with men on bases. Cihocki cracked out two triples, being thrown out at the plate on a hairline decision on one.

New City Skeet Champion

Schley Howard Jr., yesterday shot a brilliant 95x100 to tie Tom Cassells for the city skeet title of 1936. And in the ensuing shoot-off, Howard broke 24x25. Cassels shattered 21 of the flying pigeons. Howard was the "dark horse" in the field. He was considered to have an outside chance to win in pre-shoot predictions. Staff photo by Turner Hiers.

Howard, Dark Horse, Wins Atlanta Shoot

Youthful Star Triumphs in Shoot-Off With Cassels; Harkins New Junior Champion.

By Clint Davis.

Schley Howard Jr., unheralded young Atlanta scatter-gun enthusiast, yesterday won the city skeet title for 1936.

A brilliant field was entered in the annual event at the Capitol Gun Club. Howard was rated as a "dark horse," being given no more than an outside chance to win.

But when the final returns were in, young Howard and Tom Cassels were tied for the lead. Each broke 95x100. In the shoot-off that followed, Howard missed only one target in 25 and Cassels blew his chance for the championship by dropping four targets.

It was not only a brilliant but a very popular victory for Howard. And it may as well be said here that no one was any more tickled over the win than young Howard himself. Not to mention Schley Howard Sr.

The 1936 championship resulted in a complete revision of champions in the most popular sport.

NEW TITLISTS.

In addition to the crown of Atlanta champion which now adorns the head of a shooter who was rated only an outside chance, a new junior and professional champion also were crowned.

The junior championship produced one of the keenest races of the day. Harry Harkins and Luther McDonald, popular young skeeters, finished in a tie with 91x100. Three consecutive rounds were necessary to decide the shootoff. Then Harkins defeated little Luther by the very slim margin of one bird.

In the professional championship, Buddy Jones, the 1935 champion, stood on the sidelines as a spectator due to a recent operation, and watched one of his closest rivals, Sam Ham, post the day's leading score. It was a brilliant 97x100.

Ham is a new addition to the professional field and is a resident of stricken Gainesville.

SAMS IS HIGH.

Walter Sams, of Athens, won high gun for out-of-town shooters with a fine score of 95x100. Jack Knight, of Lindale, was runner-up with 89x100. Jack Boardman, the young Augusta (Ga.) shooter, found the wind a little bad on his targets and ended with an 86x100. Boardman holds the southeastern long-run record.

In the class championships, Tom Cassels was winner of the Class A race after his defeat by Howard. The writer finished as runner-up for the Class A championship with a score of 94x100.

In the Class B championship, Luther McDonald won this prize after his defeat by young Harkins for the junior title. Benson Freeman finished as runner-up with a score of 90x100.

LYMAN SMITH WINS.

Lyman Smith came through with a fine score of 89x100 to win the Class C championship. Larry Grant, trapshooting's "grand old man," finished 10 birds behind Smith to win the runner-up prize.

The 1936 championship was one of the most interesting skeets events ever held in the city and the management of the Capitol Gun Club deserve praise for its success. Jack Tway, the club secretary, was assisted by Bob Autry and Tom Cassels in handling the program.

Complete scores in the 100-bird event are listed by classes:

WARREN WINS OPENER, 14 TO 3

have lasted had his support been better.

The eight Warren run came in the third. Eidson, who singled, was driven in by Forrest's single after East Point had completed a snappy double play.

Warren scored two more in the fourth. Parham walked. Two outs followed. Then Dodgen drove him home with a double. Harper's single sent Dodgen scurrying across the plate.

Evans got the side out in the fifth and retired in favor of a pinch-hitter and new pitcher, Camp, in the seventh.

And so Warren's final salvo was delivered at the expense of Camp.

Bob Hasty, whose previous three trips to the plate had been rewarded by horse-collars, or strikeouts, started a rally with two out by singling to left.

Parham walked and Stith tripled. Pope walked. And then there was the second double steal of the game. Pope took second and Stith scored on the maneuver. The final run was delivered by Dodgen after Pope also had annexed the third by the pilfer route. Dodgen scored him with a single.

It was quite an opening. The Warren quartet sang and band furnished lively music between innings. Cracker scores were furnished over the loudspeaker through the courtesy of The Constitution.

TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD MEN No. 97

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

From his perch atop the palisade, Tarzan peered down upon the sentry. Suddenly he launched himself in a zooming dive. At the instant he landed on his victim's shoulders, his knife struck. The guard of the gateway died silently, except for a low, gasping grunt.

But as the body fell, it became entangled with the warrior's spear. The haft of the weapon broke with a sharp crack. Another sentry, hidden by the shadows, turned and saw the intruder rushing toward the gates. Then, from his throat issued a frantic cry of alarm.

At the same time, the second sentry charged, his sharp spear fixed to impale the ape-man. And already Tarzan heard wild yells answering the call of alarm. Instead of preparing to receive the charge of his shrieking antagonist, he calmly cut the ropes on the gates.

The Leopard Clan sentry dashed forward with a cry of triumph on his thick lips. His quarry could not escape through the gates, for the strength of five men was required to move those giant portals on their rusty hinges. He knew the lone invader was doomed.

Plans for Opening of Techwood Await Congressional Decisions

Formulation of plans for opening the $2,875,000 Techwood project—first under the PWA low-cost housing program—today awaits congressional action on such matters as rentals, police jurisdiction and city services.

The project itself, covering 22 1-2 acres in what was once a slum district, is 92 per cent completed, with many apartments ready for occupancy. D. A. Calhoun, district PWA housing division manager, said yesterday a final inspection will be made within 30 days.

Original plans of PWA officials were to write off 45 per cent of the government's investment and rent the apartments for between $6 and $7 a room. These plans were upset in January when Comptroller General J. R. McCarl ruled the rentals must be high enough to pay the government's total cost.

Bills Pending.

Bills are pending before the house ways and means committee at Washington to permit Secretary Ickes to name the figure tenants must pay.

Other measures before the committee would give the state, county and city authorities police jurisdiction over the government reservation on which the project is located.

Still others, Calhoun said, would permit the government to pay the city for such services as police and fire protection and garbage disposal. He has a tentative arrangement with Mayor Key to make these payments 5 per cent of the gross rentals.

The Techwood project adjoins the Georgia School of Technology. One building, a dormitory for the institution, has been occupied by students since the opening of the school term last fall.

The remainder of the project consists of apartment house buildings, covering 21 per cent of the area, and of stores, laundries, playgrounds and a central heating plant.

603 Apartments.

There are 603 apartments consisting of 2,121 rooms in 3, 4, 5 and 6-room suites.

The two and three-story buildings are all of fireproof brick construction. Sidewalks and landscaping are rapidly approaching completion.

Hot water and heat are to be included in the rental price of the apartments.

Financial plans call for repayment of the government's investment over a 60-year period.

University project for negroes, similar in most respects to Techwood, is located near Atlanta University.

The second low-cost housing project in the government program, it is expected to cost $2,500,000 and physical construction is now 76 per cent completed. Final inspection is planned for September.

Calhoun said yesterday he could give no indication of the proposed rentals there.

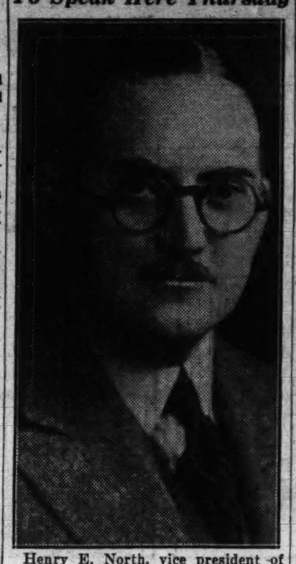

The university project is composed of 675 apartments consisting of 2,343 rooms divided into 2, 3, 4 and 5-room suites.

WOMAN 'UTOPIAN' STRICKEN BY MUMPS

PINAR DEL RIO, Cuba, April 19. (AP)—Reports from Puerto Cortes, where the ship of a band of American "Utopia seekers" put in recently, said tonight one of the women in the group was suffering from mumps.

Maurice Allard, leader of the expedition which left Key West, Fla., in March to find "a heaven in the Virgin Islands," has been in Havana.

Edward's Kin Says Hitler Is 'Gangster'

LONDON, April 19.—(UP)—Comparison of Chancellor Adolf Hitler to a gangster by the Earl of Harewood, King Edward VIII's brother-in-law, today threatened international complications.

"You will find it is difficult to draw any other parallel to Hitler's methods than that of a gangster," the earl said.

Referring to Hitler's methods of dealing with political opponents and Jews, the earl said

"All that does not interest us, but when Hitler begins terrorizing outside his own country it does begin to interest us.

"When you are talking with a highwayman or gangster you will do so more comfortably when you are armed and are wearing a bullet-proof shirt.

CHARLES G. HARRIS PASSES AWAY HERE

Former Railroad Man Will Be Buried in Oakland Today.

Charles G. Harris, former railroad man and retired Atlanta businessman, died late yesterday afternoon at a private hospital. He was 68, and lived at 1152 DeKalb avenue.

Coming to Atlanta in the early 80's from his native Rutledge, Harris was for many years associated with the old E. T., V. & G. railroad and its successor, the Southern railway.

He was also superintendent of the Georgia Car and Locomotive Company and was connected with the Buckeye Cotton Oil Company.

Surviving are his cousins, Charles H. Killian, T. D. Killian and Miss Julia Killian, with whom he lived, and cousins in Washington, Ga., Pensacola and Miami, and Columbus, Mississippi.

Funeral services will be held at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning from the chapel of Awtry & Lowndes, with the Rev. James M. Harvey officiating. Burial will be in Oakland cemetery.

Rebuild with tornado-proof
CONCRETE
FIRESAFE—PERMANENT—
SURPRISINGLY LOW COST

INEVITABLY, tornadoes will strike again. And when they do, death and destruction ride in their wake—unless you are prepared! Rebuild business buildings now with properly designed reinforced concrete.

Properly designed reinforced concrete buildings are proof against tornadoes because foundations, walls, floors, frame and roof are cast monolithically in strong, rigid concrete. And concrete withstands the fires that so often follow storm.

Write us today for interesting information on how to build with this material. Let us tell you about the new technique which creates concrete structures of distinctive beauty at no extra cost. Look at the examples in the South—the Hall County jail at Gainesville, the Columbia, S. Car. courthouse, the Atlanta jail, Georgia State Prison at Reidsville, and scores of other buildings, large and small.

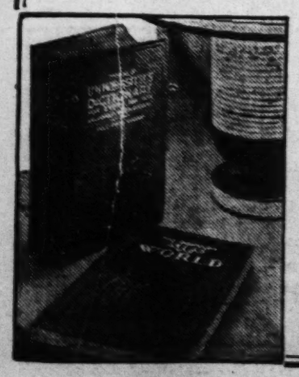

Concrete homes are storm-proof, too. They're gaining rapidly in popularity because they offer, in addition, fire-safety, comfort, low upkeep and long life at low cost.

Before you build, talk your problem over with architects and contractors who are experienced in reinforced concrete and let them show you the advantages of this material.

It will pay you to be sure that your architect and contractor are thoroughly experienced in reinforced concrete construction. You'll get a better job and save money.

By the Associated Press.

The nation's week-end traffic toll mounted to 78 fatalities yesterday as spring weather invited an increasing number of motorists to the highways.

Ohio led the list of all states with a total of nine fatalities. Three were killed and five of one family were injured in one accident at Newark, Ohio, when Jay McDowell, 32, drove an automobile in front of a passenger train.

Two other accidents, one at Oklahoma City and another at Everett, Wash., accounted for five lives each.

Fatalities by states: Ohio 9, Washington 7, Michigan 6, Illinois, Oklahoma and Virginia 5 each; Missouri, Pennsylvania and California 4 each; Kentucky, Colorado, Iowa and Georgia 3 each; South Carolina, Indiana, Minnesota, Tennessee and Arkansas 2 each; Connecticut, North Carolina, Kansas, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Louisiana 1 each.

Parents Might Well Set Example for Young

Good Example of Parents Needed To Inculcate Safety Habit in Young

Parents often tell their children to be sure to play on the sidewalk, and if they must cross the street, to be sure that a car isn't in sight and then to use the crosswalk. That's good advice in any family and in any man's town.

But how often do parents do the things which they tell their children mustn't be done? Parents frequently are seen dragging their children across streets against red lights or right across in the middle of the block. It is wondered what children sometimes think of their parents. Five minutes after some parent has "laid down the law" he can become a big hypocrite.

Toll Is High.

Last year there were more than 1,500 children under the age of four who were killed and 34,000 who were injured in automobile accidents. More than 3,200 between the ages of 5 and 14 were killed and nearly 140,000 were injured. It is important to teach young children to have safe habits and equally important for grownups to practice what they preach.

What a pitiful picture that is. More than 4,700 children under 14 years of age whose lives were snuffed out because of carelessness.

In some cases, of course, it was because of unsafe driving on the part of the motorist. But in many cases it was because the children had not been taught the rules of safety, had not been shown by their parents how to use the streets safely and sanely.

Set Good Example.

And every parent who drives carelessly, without proper regard for the "other fellow" is setting an example of driving before his children, who, in time, also will be driving.

It costs nothing to drive sanely. Very often it costs more to drive recklessly than can be estimated in terms of dollars and cents. The penalty is paid in human lives.

Become a pledged safe driver today. Clip out the pledge blank found in this issue, sign it and mail it to the Safety Council, Atlanta Constitution, wth a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Place the two safe-driving stickers which will be sent you on the front and rear windows of your car as a reminder that safety has no substitute and to show others that you are sane enough to realize it.
